

Table of Contents

Chapter One

ETHICAL THEORY: ITS NATURE AND PURPOSE 1

1. What is an ethical statement? 2. The branches of ethical theory. 3. The use of ethical theory. Further readings.

Chapter Two

TWO TESTS OF ETHICAL PRINCIPLES: CONSISTENCY AND GENERALITY 16

1. Consistency. 2. Generality. 3. Immanuel Kant's test for the morality of actions. Further readings.

Chapter Three

CAN SCIENCE SOLVE ALL ETHICAL PROBLEMS? 37

1. Must ethical reasoning start with ethical premises? 2. A proposal: in context any ethical statement can be assessed by observation and scientific method. 3. A problem: does contextualistic reasoning really justify? 4. A second problem: can appeal to science justify novel principles? Further readings.

Chapter Four

THE USE OF AUTHORITY IN ETHICS 56

1. Public opinion or institutions as an authority. 2. Religious teachers or God as ethical authorities. Further readings.

*Chapter Five*ETHICAL SYSTEMS IN DIFFERENT CULTURES AND THEIR DEVELOPMENT

83

1. There are ethical standards in every society. 2. The reason for ethical standards. 3. How similar are the ethical principles of different societies? 4. Are there ultimate disagreements about ethical principle? Further readings. 5. The scientific theory of the ethical standards of social groups.

*Chapter Six*THE DEVELOPMENT OF ETHICAL VALUES IN THE INDIVIDUAL

114

1. The problem for psychology. 2. Observations about the genesis of values, especially moral values. 3. A stimulus-response theory of learning: Clark Hull. 4. Freudian psychoanalytic theory. 5. Gestalt theory. Further readings.

Chapter Seven

ETHICAL NATURALISM

151

1. The central idea of ethical naturalism. 2. How shall we decide what our words mean? 3. Overt and covert synonymy. 4. First example of naturalism: Edward Westermarck. 5. Second example of naturalism: Ralph Barton Perry. 6. Third example of naturalism: the ideal observer theory. 7. Concluding remarks about naturalism. Further readings.

Chapter Eight

NONNATURAL PROPERTIES

183

1. The cardinal tenets of nonnaturalism. 2. Puzzles for non-naturalists. Further readings.

*Chapter Nine*NONCOGNITIVISM: THE JOB OF ETHICAL SENTENCES IS NOT TO STATE FACTS

203

1. The emotive theory. 2. Why believe the emotive theory? 3. A revision: R. M. Hare. 4. Doubts about the emotive theory, revised or unrevised. 5. More jobs for ethical language: multifunctionalism. Further readings.

Chapter Ten

THE JUSTIFICATION OF ETHICAL BELIEFS 241

1. A parallel with the logic of science. 2. The qualified attitude method as the "standard" method. 3. Is there an acceptable alternative? 4. Positive support for the qualified attitude method. Further readings.

Chapter Eleven

ETHICAL RELATIVISM 271

1. The question: "Are conflicting ethical opinions equally valid?" 2. Methodological relativism. 3. Nonmethodological relativism: relativism "proper." 4. Ethical universals. 5. A special brand of ethics for relativists? Further readings.

Chapter Twelve

THINGS WORTHWHILE IN THEMSELVES:
(A) ENJOYMENTS 295

1. Are normative principles just "matters of opinion"? 2. The desirable and the intrinsically desirable. 3. What is pleasure? 4. Psychological hedonism. 5. Some difficulties for hedonism. 6. The concept of a "sum" of pleasures. 7. Science and the life of pleasure. Further readings.

Chapter Thirteen

THINGS WORTHWHILE IN THEMSELVES:
(B) PLURALIST THEORIES 332

1. Is knowledge intrinsically desirable? 2. Miscellaneous intrinsic goods. 3. Character traits as intrinsically desirable. 4. Comparative judgments of value. Further readings.

Chapter Fourteen

MORAL OBLIGATION AND PERSONAL INTEREST 353

1. The concept of moral obligation. 2. Egoism: we are obligated to benefit ourselves. 3. Is it reasonable to sacrifice personal interest for the sake of duty? Further readings.

Chapter Fifteen

MORAL OBLIGATION AND GENERAL WELFARE 380

1. Act-utilitarianism: its force and problems.
2. The formalist theory stated.
3. The compromise: rule-utilitarianism.
4. Formalism or rule-utilitarianism? Further readings.

Chapter Sixteen

DISTRIBUTIVE JUSTICE 407

1. The meaning of "just."
2. Questions of economic justice require assessment of the social order.
3. The utilitarian theory of distribution.
4. Some nonutilitarian principles.
5. Conclusions. Further readings.

Chapter Seventeen

HUMAN RIGHTS 433

1. The concept of rights.
2. A theory about rights: John Locke.
3. Are there specific natural rights that are universal and absolute?
4. Types of specific prima facie natural rights.
5. Three prima facie rights: life, liberty, and property. Further readings.

Chapter Eighteen

MORAL ASSESSMENTS OF ACTIONS AND PERSONS 455

1. The language of moral assessments.
2. The meaning of "reprehensible" and "morally admirable."
3. What make actions, thoughts, or feelings reprehensible?
4. Character and conscientiousness.
5. Excuses.
6. Normative principles for moral assessments. Further readings.

Chapter Nineteen

RETRIBUTIVE JUSTICE AND CRIMINAL LAW 480

1. The principles of criminal law.
2. The utilitarian theory of criminal justice.
3. The retributive theory of criminal justice.
4. A second formalist theory.
5. Utilitarianism and reform. Further readings.

Chapter Twenty

ETHICS AND DETERMINISM 506

1. Determinism and its grounds.
2. What determinism is not.
3. Determinism and moral obligation: does “ought” imply “can”?
4. Determinism and the theory of punishment.
5. Determinism and the moral assessment of deeds. Further readings.

INDEX 529