

TABLE OF CONTENTS

CHAPTER	PAGE
I. MIND AS SUBSTANCE . . . . .	I
1. Primitive Conceptions of Mind . . . . .	I
2. Substance and Substantive . . . . .	5
3. The Genesis of the Concept of Substance . . . . .	8
4. Plato and the Substance Tradition . . . . .	12
5. Function and Substance in Aristotle . . . . .	16
6. The Background of Cartesianism . . . . .	21
7. The Cartesian Dualism . . . . .	24
8. The Galilean-Cartesian-Newtonian World-View . . . . .	27
9. The Reactions of Hobbes and Spinoza . . . . .	30
10. The Berkeleian Alternative . . . . .	33
11. Hume and Kant . . . . .	36
12. An Evaluation of the Concept of Substance . . . . .	41
II. MIND AS PROCESS . . . . .	47
13. Idealism and Process: Mind as Concrete Universal . . . . .	47
14. Hegel's Doctrine of Absolute Mind . . . . .	53
15. A Critical Glance at the Hegelian Position . . . . .	56
16. Bradley: Mind as Organic Wholeness . . . . .	61
17. Bradley's Treatment of Finite Mind . . . . .	63
18. Bosanquet: Mind and Totality . . . . .	67
19. Bosanquet on Finite Mind . . . . .	69
20. Bosanquet's Passage from Identity to Subject . . . . .	72
21. An Evaluation of Absolute Idealism . . . . .	76
22. Bergson and Idealistic Activism . . . . .	79
23. Bergson and Unconscious Psychic States . . . . .	82
24. Actus purus : Leibniz, Fichte, Gentile . . . . .	88
25. Gentile: Mind as Pure Act . . . . .	92
26. The Case against Mentalism . . . . .	96
III. MIND AS RELATION . . . . .	102
27. The Foundations of New Realism: Hume . . . . .	102
28. Confusion of Mind-Centric and Body-Centric Predica- ments . . . . .	105
29. Holt: Mind as Field of Objects Selected by Response . . . . .	110

TABLE OF CONTENTS

CHAPTER	PAGE
30. Difficulties in the Concept of Specific Response. . . . .	114
31. Holt on Knowledge, Meaning, and Error. . . . .	118
32. Mach and Russell: Mind as a Collection of Events. . . . .	124
33. Meaning as Irreducible to Sensations and Images . . . . .	129
34. Russell's Reformulation of the Nature of Mind . . . . .	134
35. The Avoidance of Psychophysical Dualism by American New Realism . . . . .	138
36. Difficulties of the Relational Theory of Mind . . . . .	143
 IV. MIND AS INTENTIONAL ACT . . . . .	 149
37. Brentano and the Historical Background. . . . .	149
38. Moore, Alexander, Laird: Mind as Continuum of Acts of Awareness . . . . .	152
39. Laird, Broad, and the Existence of the Act . . . . .	157
40. English New Realism and the Problems of Awareness, Knowledge, and Error . . . . .	161
41. The Higher Mental Processes . . . . .	165
42. Meinong's Gegenstandstheorie . . . . .	168
43. Mind in Husserl's Phänomenologie . . . . .	173
44. Radical Empiricism and Husserl's Idealism . . . . .	178
45. Whitehead: Mind as Prehension of Eternal Objects . . . . .	182
46. The Theory Considered in Relation to the Difficulties of New Realism: Givenness . . . . .	187
47. Psychophysical and Epistemological Dualism . . . . .	190
48. Is Knowledge Direct or Mediate for Whitehead? . . . . .	195
49. A Functionalistic Alternative to Whitehead's Emergent New Realism . . . . .	200
50. A Glance Behind and a Glance Ahead . . . . .	202
 V. MIND AS SUBSTANTIVE . . . . .	 206
51. Driesch and Immaterial Substantialism . . . . .	206
52. Difficulties Encountered . . . . .	210
53. The Orientation of Critical Realism . . . . .	213
54. Strong and Panpsychism . . . . .	217
55. The Argument for the Existence of Psychic States . . . . .	221
56. Given Events as Nonexistential . . . . .	225
57. Essences as Meanings; sensa as Existential . . . . .	230
58. Santayana and the Realm of Essence . . . . .	233
59. The Double-Aspect Doctrine: Drake, Morgan, Sellars . . . . .	237
60. The Basic Confusion of the Double-Aspect Theorists . . . . .	241

TABLE OF CONTENTS

xi

CHAPTER	PAGE
61. Lovejoy's Arguments in Favor of Dualism . . . . .	246
62. A Defense of Objective Relativism . . . . .	252
63. The Place of the Self and the Subjective in Objective Relativism . . . . .	259
64. An Examination of Lovejoy's Alternative . . . . .	265
65. The Status of Critical Realism as a Theory of Mind. . . . .	270
 VI. MIND AS FUNCTION . . . . .	 274
66. The Pragmatic Orientation . . . . .	274
67. The Meaning of "Function" . . . . .	275
68. Schopenhauer, Nietzsche, and Vaihinger as Instrumen- talists . . . . .	278
69. Peirce on Mind and the Symbol . . . . .	282
70. Relation and Function in James's Views of Mind and Knowledge . . . . .	286
71. Dewey's Doctrine of Experience as Adjectival . . . . .	290
72. Behavior, Consciousness, and Mind . . . . .	294
73. Dewey: Mind as the Functioning of Symbols . . . . .	297
74. General Aspects of the Knowledge Process . . . . .	302
75. Truth, Action, and Verification . . . . .	307
76. Knowledge as Involving Relational Structure . . . . .	312
77. Mind as Social . . . . .	320
78. Mead's Analysis of the Symbol and the Self . . . . .	322
79. Dewey's Metaphysical Background: Emergent Realism . . . . .	325
80. A Comparison of Functionalism and the Five Alternative Theories of Mind . . . . .	327
 INDEX . . . . .	 331