

CONTENTS

Introduction to the Second Edition	ix
Foreword by Thomas Nickles	xxv
Preface	xxvii

PART ONE

ISSUES IN DEFINING THE FIELD OF SOCIAL EPISTEMOLOGY

1. An Overview of Social Epistemology 3
 1. Social Epistemology as the Goal of All Epistemology, 4
 2. Social Epistemology as the Pursuit of Scandal and Extravagance, 10
 3. Nonnormative Social Epistemology and Other Accommodating Banalities, 17
 4. Social Epistemology Rendered Normative and Epistemology Rendered Interesting, 24

2. Social Epistemology and Social Metaphysics 31
 1. Drawing the Distinction, 31
 2. Transcendental and Naturalistic Approaches to Representation, 36
 - 2.1. Naturalism among the Savages, 45
 - 2.2. Naturalism among the Systems, 47
 3. Explaining Transcendentalism Naturalistically: Bloor on Popper, 51

PART TWO

ISSUES IN THE LANGUAGE AND HISTORY OF KNOWLEDGE PRODUCTION

3. Realism, The Moving Target of Science Studies: A Tale of Philosophers, Historians, and Sociologists in Hot Pursuit 65
 1. Realism: Who's Got the Burden of Proof? 66
 2. Why Is It Now So Difficult to Defeat the Realist? 69
 3. Putting Scientific Realism to the Historical Test, 73
 4. Kuhn and the Realism of Many-Worlds, 85
 5. Regulative and Constitutive Realism in the Human Sciences, 89
 6. The Ultimate Solution to the Problem of Realism, 96

4. Bearing the Burden of Proof: On the Frontier of Science and History	99
1. Feyerabend and the Problem of "Rival Yet Incommensurable" Theories, 100
2. The Missing Link: Burden of Proof, 105
3. Burden of Proof as Tacit Knowledge: Rule-Governedness, 111
5. Incommensurability Explained and Defended	117
1. Ecological Incommensurability, 117
2. Textual Incommensurability, 128
6. The Inscrutability of Silence and the Problem of Knowledge in the Human Sciences	139
1. Inscrutability and the Analytic Philosophy of Language, 139
2. Inscrutability as a Neglected but Persistent Theme in the History of the Human Sciences, 147
3. Conjuring Up Inscrutability in Thought Experiments, 151
4. Postscript: A Diagnosis of Davidsonism, 158
Appendix A: How to Do Subtle Things with Words--The Ins and Outs of Conceptual Scheming	163

PART THREE

ISSUES IN THE SOCIAL ORGANIZATION OF KNOWLEDGE

7. The Demarcation of Science: A Problem Whose Demise Has Been Greatly Exaggerated	175
1. Laudan and Gieryn on the Demarcation Problem, 175
2. The Two Histories of Science: Of Role and Player, 178
3. Science and Its Kindred Roles, 182
4. Conflating Role and Player as an Historiographical Strategy, 185
5. New Demarcation Criteria for Science, 188
8. Disciplinary Boundaries: A Conceptual Map of the Field	191
1. The Boundedness, Autonomy, and Purity of Disciplines, 191
2. Three Techniques for Detecting Disciplinary Boundaries, 193
3. Are Disciplinary Boundaries Necessary for the Growth of Knowledge? 195
4. When Disciplines Collide: The Bernard Principle, 197
5. Disciplinary Ambivalence: Popperian and Foucauldian Versions, 201

9. The Elusiveness of Consensus in Science	207
1. Two Pure Types of Consensus and Four Mixed Ones, 208
2. The Elusive Object of Consensus in Science, 216
3. Consensus Rigging By Disciplinary Realignment, 221
4. Implications for the Historiography of Science, 226
10. From Moral Psychology to Cognitive Sociology: Making Sense of the Forman Thesis	233
1. The Social Historian in the Grip of Moral Psychology, 233
2. Toward Cognitive Sociology and the Problem of Objectivity, 239
3. Implications for Rewriting the Forman Thesis, 244
Appendix B: Having Them Change against Their Will--Policy Simulations of Objectivity	251
PART FOUR ISSUES IN KNOWLEDGE POLICY-MAKING
11. Toward a Revival of the Normative in the Sociology of Knowledge	263
1. Normativity Lost, 264
2. Normativity Regained, 267
3. Freedom and the Administration of Knowledge Production, 270
12. Social Epistemology and the Problem of Authoritarianism	277
1. The Lure and Avoidance of Cognitive Authoritarianism, 277
2. Expertise Politicized and Depoliticized, 283
Appendix C: Notes toward Designing a Core Curriculum for a Graduate Program in Knowledge Policy Studies	289
Bibliography	295
Index	313