

Table of Contents

Editor's Introduction	ix
-----------------------------	----

Chapter I

1. Traces of the guiding thought in the philosophical tradition. The concealed in philosophical approaches	1
2. Hidden foundations of life: evidences in poetry and philosophy ...	4
3. Existence, thought, style: the coming to light of a timeless primary relation	9
4. "The metaphor is much more subtle than its inventor" (Lichtenberg). Associative undercurrents from the realm of the author's experience ...	14

Chapter II

1. Kierkegaard's circular movement of thought as parameters of refer- ence for a new way of reading	19
2. Metaphor as companion of the concept: dialectical transformations	23
2.1. The metaphorical appeal to the will to change	23
2.2. "The fragrance of experience" in the situation of remembrance ..	28
3. The leading images of spinning and weaving	30
4. Prerequisites of the use of images in the mode of existential experience: a historical demarcation of unpoetic method	38
5. Acoustic, optic, rhythm—media of perception and reception	42
5.1. The rhythmical movement of thought	42
5.2. The metaphoric of eye and ear	47
5.3. The soul's guide in man	51
6. The proximity of poetry and philosophy: personality as the first condition of communicating truth	54

Chapter III

1. The spiritual background of the nature-metaphoric 63
2. The return to the pictorial in the nineteenth century and its manifestation in the form of expression 69
3. Self-knowledge as the absolute condition for all understanding and the reflection of the degree of self-knowledge in style 72

Chapter IV

1. The metaphor of light. The light of metaphor. The gradual dissociation of the light-metaphoric from the Transcendent in modern thought 79
 - 1.1. The reflex of the mode of existence in the light-metaphoric.. 79
 - 1.2. The twentieth century: the age of world night and the inversion of the meaning of darkness 86
 - 1.3. Two sources of light: "the brilliance of the eternal" and "the enlightened nineteenth century" 92
 - 1.4. The wager of showing oneself, the flight into general abstraction and its impression in style 97
2. Berlin and the pre-conceptual: the rediscovery of a forgotten sentence: "Speak, that I might see you" 107
3. Optical orientations. A morphological impression of the moment of the age as a sign of the loss of subjectivity 116

Chapter V

1. Sceptical thought in the sphere of possibility and originality in style 127
 - 1.1. The breach of the ideal identity of thought and being in the flow of existence 127
 - 1.2. Immediate perception and immediate knowledge as the mainstay of doubt 128
 - 1.3. The gravitational field of balancing possibilites as the substratum of the "art of equivocation" 131

2. The departure from terra firma
as the expression of the poetic/philosophical sense of place 136
3. Pretence of ratio and humor. The inward-directed shift of perspective from temporality to the eternal 139

Chapter VI

1. Immediacy before and after reflection: the dialectical change of meaning of the metaphors of eye and ear 145
2. The expansion of the horizon 149
 - 2.1. "The journey to eternity":
the sea as the proving ground of the spirit 149
 - 2.2. The sea as the way to the transcendent home and its profanation through hidden anxiety of the infinite 151

Chapter VII

1. Remaining in the primary mood of silence.
The revaluation of the virtue of valor and its exegetical potential 157
 2. Silence as preparatory modality for essential speaking 162
 3. Listening kinships of the spirit and the acoustic essence of remembrance 167
- Bibliography of Cited Works 173
- Index of Names 183