
Contents

Translator's Introduction	ix
Bibliographic Note	xli
List of Bibliographic Abbreviations	xliii
Introduction: The Problem of Historicity as the Starting Point and Goal of This Work. The Purpose of the Present Interpretation	1
I
Interpretation of Hegel's Logic in the Light of Its Ontological Problematic: Being as Motility
1 The Analytical and Historical Problem at the Origin of Hegel's First Published Writings	9
2 The Attainment of a New Concept of Being through an Analysis of Kant's Concept of Transcendental Synthesis	22
3 The Absolute Difference within Being: Equality-with-Self-in-Otherness. Being as Motility	39
4 Motility as Change. The Finitude of Beings	50
5 Finitude as Infinity. Infinity as Characteristic of Motility	57

6 The Emergence of a New Dimension of Being and Motility: The “Recollection” of Immediate Beings as “Essence”	65
7 The Motility of Essence in Its Two Dimensions. The “Ground” and the “Unity” of Beings	71
8 Being as Existence	80
9 Actuality as the Fulfillment of Being	90
10 A Summary Characterization of Actuality as Motility	103
11 The Comprehending Being (the Concept) as True Being. Substance as Subject	111
12 The Mode of Being of the Concept: The Individuation of Universality. Judgment and Conclusion	122
13 The Unfree Reality of the Concept: Objectivity	135
14 The Free and True Reality of the Concept: The Idea	144
15 Life as the Truth of Beings. The Ideas of Life and Cognition	153
16 The Absolute Idea	171
17 Overview of the Preceding and Transition to Part II	187
II
The Ontological Concept of Life in Its Historicity as the Original Foundation of Hegelian Ontology
18 Life as the Fundamental Concept of the Early Theological Writings	201
19 Life as the Form of “Absolute Spirit” in the Jena Logic .	219

Life as an Ontological Concept in the Phenomenology of Spirit
20 Introduction and General Definition of the Concept of Life	228
21 The Immediacy of the Life Process	250
22 The Historicity of the Life Process: The Actualization of Self-Consciousness as Reason	264
23 The Historicity of the Life Process: The Actualization of Self-Consciousness in the “Doing of Each and Everyone.” The Object of “Work” and the “Thing Itself”	276
24 The Transformation of the Concept of Life into the Ontological Concept of Spirit	292
25 The Transformation of the Process of Knowing into the Process of Absolute Knowledge. The Fundamental Determinations of “History” in the Conclusion to the Phenomenology of Spirit	305
26 Conclusion: Hegel’s Fundamental Definition of Historicity as Presented in Dilthey’s “The Construction of the Historical World in the Human Sciences”	319
Notes	325
Glossary	333
Index	347