

Contents

Introduction and Acknowledgments	3
Chapter I
The Crisis of Rationality	15
The Crisis of Modern Science	16
Quo Vadis, Cartesius?	20
Husserl's Reaction	30
The Onto-Genesis of Rationality	36
Chapter II
Peter Winch's Search for a Social Rationality	53
Winch's Criticism of Empiricism	54
Winch's Conception of Rationality	69
Critical Dialogue: Reason and Reasonableness	90
Chapter III
Heidegger's Quest for Authentic Reason	123
Heidegger's Criticism of Instrumental Reason	124
Heidegger's Understanding of Reason as the most authentic Form of Being	130
The Common Root: Being, Reason and Reasonableness	139
Chapter IV
Habermas' Theory of Consensus	149
Toward a Theory of Consensus	150
The Meaning of Consensus	155
The Inner Relationship between Rationality and Consensus	165
Reason as Dialogical Communication or Consensus as Rationality	171

Chapter V
The Confucian Reasonableness	183
The Crisis of Rationality and the Return to Reasonableness	184
Confucius' Idea of Reasonableness	192
The Forms of Reasonableness	213
Conclusion
Reason, Rationality and Reasonableness	245
Bibliography	269