

CONTENTS

PREFACE 11

INTRODUCTION 13
 Being a person 14
 Self-creation 16

PART ONE: WHAT IS A PERSON?

CHAPTER ONE: MULTIPLE PERSONALITY 21

 Problems of interpretation 24
 Unconscious sub-systems 26
 Self-deception 27
 Are conscious sub-systems possible? 29

CHAPTER TWO: SPLIT BRAINS 32

 Disconnections and confabulation 35
 Rival interpretations of the split brain studies 37
 Can consciousness divide? 37
 Is the patients' consciousness divided during the experiments? 39
 Is their consciousness divided at other times? 40
 Do we all have permanently divided consciousness? 43
 Ways of counting minds 44

CHAPTER THREE: THE FRAGMENTATION OF CONSCIOUSNESS 47

 Objections to 'impersonal' experiences 49
 Sub-personal experience 52

CHAPTER FOUR: INTEGRATION 54

 Link-ups 56
 Hierarchies of control 58

CHAPTER FIVE: PERSONS AND SELF-CONSCIOUSNESS	59
CHAPTER SIX: THE WORD 'I'	62
Adhesiveness	63
Elusiveness	63
Irreducibility	65
'I' as an indexical	66
The flexible reference of 'I'	67
CHAPTER SEVEN: THE BODY	69
The face	70
The role of the body in perception	72
The role of the body in action	74
Links between perception and action	76
Sharp boundaries	77
My body perceived	78
Disorders of body image	79
CHAPTER EIGHT: AM I MY BODY?	83
Is my whole body essential to me?	84
My mental life	85
CHAPTER NINE: THE EGO	88
Language	90
Our life history	92
Hegel's suggestion	93
Subjectivity	94
Perception	95
Decision and action	96
Has the ego a role?	97
CHAPTER TEN: ALTERNATIVES TO THE EGO	98
The partial convergence of the bodily and mental approaches	99
Closest continuers	101
From identity to survival: Parfit	101
Some possible consequences	103
The separateness of persons	104
Some comments	105

PART TWO: SELF-CREATION

CHAPTER ELEVEN: FOLK PSYCHOLOGY	109
Psychology and common sense	110
Some possibilities of progress in folk psychology	113
Towards a folk psychology of personal identity	116
CHAPTER TWELVE: FREUD'S EGO	118
Freud's account in outline	120
Eliminating the spatial metaphors	123
The control centre	124
Depersonalization and splitting	126
Draining the Zuyder Zee	127
The ego from Descartes to Freud	129
CHAPTER THIRTEEN: PROJECTS OF SELF-CREATION	131
Work	133
Style	134
Avoiding some exaggerations	135
'The real me'	136
Three entangled processes	138
CHAPTER FOURTEEN: THE INNER STORY	139
H.M.	140
Charged memory	141
Proust's explanation	142
Past responses and the inner story	145
The inner story as non-fiction	147
Abridgment and editing	149
The inner story and self-creation	152
CHAPTER FIFTEEN: BELIEF	154
Systems of belief	154
Beliefs and identity	157
Discovering and creating beliefs	161
Beliefs about beliefs	162

CHAPTER SIXTEEN: RECOGNITION	164
The need for recognition	164
Relationships	166
Commitments	168
CHAPTER SEVENTEEN: THE SOCIAL SELF	170
Role theory	170
Doubts about role theory	172
The social construction of the inner core	175
Knowing what I am like	176
The inner core and determinism	178
CHAPTER EIGHTEEN: IS SELF-CREATION POSSIBLE?	179
Determinism	181
The rejection of fatalism	183
Models of free action	183
Defences of the reactive attitudes	187
What would the world of hard determinism be like?	191
CHAPTER NINETEEN: WE	193
The view from Mars	193
Some sources of group conflict	195
Tribalism and identity	196
Groups and recognition	199
Alternatives	201
Growing up	202
INDEX	205