

CONTENTS

Chapter	Page
Eleven: KANT (2): THE PROBLEMS OF THE FIRST Critique	7
The general problem of metaphysics—The problem of a priori knowledge—The divisions of this problem—Kant's Copernican revolution—Sensibility, understanding, reason, and the structure of the first Critique —The significance of the first Critique in the context of the general problem of Kant's philosophy.
Twelve: KANT (3): SCIENTIFIC KNOWLEDGE	30
Space and time—Mathematics—The pure concepts or categories of the understanding—The justification of the application of the categories—The schematism of the categories—Synthetic a priori principles—The possibility of the pure science of Nature—Phenomena and noumena—The refutation of idealism—Concluding remarks.
Thirteen: KANT (4): METAPHYSICS UNDER FIRE	71
Introductory remarks—The transcendental Ideas of pure reason—The paralogisms of rational psychology—The antinomies of speculative cosmology—The impossibility of proving the existence of God—The regulative use of the transcendental Ideas of pure reason—Metaphysics and meaning.
Fourteen: KANT (5): MORALITY AND RELIGION	101
Kant's aim—The good will—Duty and inclination—Duty and law—The categorical imperative—

Chapter	Page
The rational being as an end in itself – The autonomy of the will – The kingdom of ends – Freedom as the condition of the possibility of a categorical imperative – The postulates of practical reason: freedom, Kant's idea of the perfect good, immortality, God, the general theory of the postulates – Kant on religion – Concluding remarks.
Fifteen: KANT (6): AESTHETICS AND TELEOLOGY	141
The mediating function of judgment – The analytic of the beautiful – The analytic of the sublime – The deduction of pure aesthetic judgments – Fine art and genius – The dialectic of the aesthetic judgment – The beautiful as a symbol of the morally good – The teleological judgment – Teleology and mechanism – Physico-theology and ethico-theology.
Sixteen: KANT (7): REMARKS ON THE Opus Postumum	171
The transition from the metaphysics of Nature to physics – Transcendental philosophy and the construction of experience – The objectivity of the Idea of God – Man as person and as microcosm.
Seventeen: CONCLUDING REVIEW	184
Introductory remarks – Continental rationalism – British empiricism – The Enlightenment and the science of man – The philosophy of history – Immanuel Kant – Final remarks.
APPENDIX: A Short Bibliography	230
NOTES	238
INDEX	249