

Contents

Preface	7
Introduction	11
1 Some schools of social theory and philosophy	23
Existential phenomenology: Schutz	24
‘Ethnomethodology’	33
Post-Wittgensteinian philosophy: Winch	44
Summary: the significance of interpretative sociologies	51
Hermeneutics and critical theory: Gadamer, Apel, Habermas	54
2 Agency, act-identifications and communicative intent	71
Problems of agency	71
Intentions and projects	75
The identification of acts	78
The rationalization of action	81
Meaning and communicative intent	86
3 The production and reproduction of social life	93
Order, power, conflict: Durkheim and Parsons	93
Order, power, conflict: Marx	98
The production of communication as ‘meaningful’	104
Moral orders of interaction	108
Relations of power in interaction	110
Rationalization and reflexivity	114
The motivation of action	116
The production and reproduction of structures	118
Summary	126
4 The form of explanatory accounts	130
Positivistic dilemmas	131
The newer philosophy of science: Popper and Kuhn	135
Science and non-science	138

6 Contents

Paradigms	142
Relativism and hermeneutic analysis	144
The problem of adequacy	148
Conclusion: Some new rules of sociological method	155
Notes and references	163
Bibliography of works referred to in the text	179
Index	189