

Contents

	ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS	vii
Introduction		xvii
1. Fragments of Simmel's Life and Mind		xviii
2. Simmel in America		xxiv
3. The Translations		xxv
4. Simmel's "Field of Sociology"		xxvii
(A) "SOCIETY" AND "INDIVIDUAL"		xxviii
(B) SOCIOLOGY		xxxi
(C) SOCIOLOGY AS A METHOD		xxxi
(D) "GENERAL" SOCIOLOGY		xxxii
(E) "FORMAL" SOCIOLOGY		xxxiv
(F) "PHILOSOPHICAL" SOCIOLOGY		xxxiv
(G) SIMMEL'S SOCIOLOGY AS THE EXPRESSION OF AN ATTITUDE		xxxv
(H) SIMMEL'S PROBLEMS		xxxv
(I) THE "SOCIALIZATION OF THE SPIRIT" VS. SOCIOLOGY AS A METHOD		xxxvi
(J) "GENERAL" VS. "FORMAL" SOCIOLOGY		xxxvii
(K) THE "SOCIETAL FORMS"		xxxviii
(L) THE RELATION OF SIMMEL'S PHILOSOPHICAL TO HIS SOCIOLOGICAL CONCERNS		xxxix
5. The Methodological and Philosophical Importance of Simmel's Sociology		xl
Notes		xlii
Appendices
(A) LITERATURE ON SIMMEL		li
(B) THE BIBLIOGRAPHY OF SIMMEL'S WRITINGS		liv
(C) SIMMEL'S MAJOR WORKS		lv
(D) SIMMEL'S WRITINGS AVAILABLE IN ENGLISH		lvii
(E) DISCUSSIONS, IN ENGLISH, OF SIMMEL AS A SOCIOLOGIST		lix
(F) SOURCES OF THE TRANSLATIONS CONTAINED IN THIS VOLUME		lxi
(G) A NOTE ON THE TRANSLATION		lxiii

PART ONE: Fundamental Problems of Sociology (Individual and Society)

I. THE FIELD OF SOCIOLOGY	3
1. Society and Knowledge of Society	3
2. The Abstract Character of Sociology	11
3. Sociology as a Method	13
4. The Problem Areas of Sociology	16
(A) THE SOCIOLOGICAL STUDY OF HISTORICAL LIFE ("GENERAL SOCIOLOGY")	16
(B) THE STUDY OF SOCIETAL FORMS ("PURE, OR FORMAL, SOCIOLOGY")	21
(C) THE STUDY OF THE EPISTEMOLOGICAL AND METAPHYSICAL ASPECTS OF SOCIETY ("PHILOSOPHICAL SOCIOLOGY")	23
 II. THE SOCIAL AND THE INDIVIDUAL LEVEL (AN EXAMPLE OF GENERAL SOCIOLOGY)	 26
1. The Determinateness of the Group and the Vacillation of the Individual	26
2. Individual vs. Group Member	28
3. Esteem of the Old and of the New	29
4. The Sociological Significance of Individual Similarity and Dissimilarity	30
5. The Individual's Superiority over the Mass	31
6. The Simplicity and Radicalism of the Mass	34
7. The Emotionality of the Mass Appeal and of the Mass	34
8. The Level of Society as the Approximation to the Lowest Common Level of Its Members	36
 III. SOCIABILITY (AN EXAMPLE OF PURE, OF FORMAL, SOCIOLOGY)	 40
1. Contents (Materials) vs. Forms of Social Life	40
2. The Autonomization of Contents	41
3. Sociability as the Autonomous Form, or Play-Form, of Sociation	43
(A) UNREALITY, TACT, IMPERSONALITY	45

(B) "SOCIABILITY THRESHOLDS"	46
(C) THE "SOCIABILITY DRIVE" AND THE DEMOCRATIC NATURE OF SOCIABILITY	47
(D) THE ARTIFICIAL WORLD OF SOCIABILITY	48
(E) SOCIAL GAMES	49
(F) COQUETRY	50
(G) CONVERSATION	51
(H) SOCIABILITY AS THE PLAY-FORM OF ETHICAL PROBLEMS AND OF THEIR SOLUTION	53
(I) HISTORICAL ILLUSTRATIONS	54
(J) THE "SUPERFICIAL" CHARACTER OF SOCIABILITY	55
IV. INDIVIDUAL AND SOCIETY IN EIGHTEENTH- AND NINETEENTH-CENTURY VIEWS OF LIFE (AN EXAMPLE OF PHILOSOPHICAL SOCIOLOGY)	58
1. Individual Life as the Basis of the Conflict between Individual and Society	58
2. Individual Egoism vs. Individual Self-Perfection as an Objective Value	59
3. The Social vs. the Human	61
4. The Eighteenth Century	64
(A) THE FREEDOM OF THE INDIVIDUAL	64
(B) THE ANTINOMY BETWEEN FREEDOM AND EQUALITY	65
(C) "NATURAL MAN"	67
(D) INDIVIDUALISM IN KANT	69
(E) THE DUAL ROLE OF "NATURE"	70
(F) KANT'S "CATEGORICAL IMPERATIVE": INDIVIDUALITY AS THE SYNTHESIS OF FREEDOM AND EQUALITY	72
5. The Nineteenth Century	73
(A) SOCIALISM	73
(B) THE NEW INDIVIDUALISM: THE INCOMPARABILITY OF THE INDIVIDUAL	78
PART TWO: Quantitative Aspects of the Group
I. ON THE SIGNIFICANCE OF NUMBERS FOR SOCIAL LIFE	87
1. Small Groups	87
(A) SOCIALISM	87

xii Contents

(B) RELIGIOUS SECTS	89
(C) ARISTOCRACIES	90
2. Large Groups: The Mass	93
3. Group Size, Radicalism, and Cohesiveness	94
4. Paradoxes in Group Structure	96
5. Numerical Aspects of Prominent Group Members	97
6. Custom, Law, Morality	99
II. THE QUANTITATIVE DETERMINATION OF GROUP DIVISIONS AND OF CERTAIN GROUPS	105
1. Introduction	105
2. Numerically Equal Subdivisions	105
3. The Number as a Symbol of Group Division	107
4. Group Organization on Numerical Principles and Its Effect upon the Individual	109
5. The Social Gathering ("Party")	111
6. The Extended Family	114
7. Quantity and Quality	115
III. THE ISOLATED INDIVIDUAL AND THE DYAD	118
1. Introduction	118
2. The Isolated Individual	118
3. Isolation	119
4. Freedom	120
5. The Dyad	122
6. Characteristics of the Dyad	125
(A) TRIVIALITY	125
(B) INTIMACY	126
7. Monogamous Marriage	128
8. Delegation of Duties and Responsibilities to the Group	133
9. The Expansion of the Dyad	135
(A) THE TRIAD VS. THE DYAD	135
(B) TWO TYPES OF INDIVIDUALITY AND THEIR CONNECTION WITH DYADIC AND OTHER RELATIONSHIPS	137
(C) DYADS, TRIADS, AND LARGER GROUPS	138
(D) THE FORMAL RADICALISM OF THE MASS	142

IV. THE TRIAD	145
1. The Sociological Significance of the Third Element	145
2. The Non-Partisan and the Mediator	145
3. The Tertius Gaudens	154
4. Divide et Impera	162
V. THE IMPORTANCE OF SPECIFIC NUMBERS FOR RELATIONS AMONG GROUPS	170
1. Group Subdivisions	170
2. The Decimal Principle	171
3. The Outside Regulation of Groups According to Their Maximum and Minimum Sizes	174

PART THREE: Superordination and Subordination

I. INTRODUCTION	181
1. Domination, a Form of Interaction	181
2. Authority and Prestige	183
3. Leader and Led	185
4. Interaction in the Idea of "Law"	186
II. SUBORDINATION UNDER AN INDIVIDUAL	190
1. Three Kinds of Subordination	190
2. Kinds of Subordination under an Individual	190
3. Unification of a Group in Opposition to the Ruler	192
4. Dissociating Effects of Subordination under an Individ- ual	194
5. The "Higher Tribunal"	195
6. Domination and Leveling	197
7. Domination and Downward Gradation	206
8. Domination and Upward Gradation	209
9. Mixture of Downward and Upward Gradation	210
10. Strength and Perseverance of Domination by One	213
11. Subordination of the Group to a Member or to an Out- sider	216
12. Coordination of Parties in Case of Arbitration	221

III. SUBORDINATION UNDER A PLURALITY	224
1. Consequences for the Subordinates of Subordination under a Plurality	224
2. Subordination under a Heterogeneous Plurality	229
3. Subordination under Mutually Opposed Superordinates	229
(A) TOTAL SUBORDINATION	229
(B) RELATIVE SUBORDINATION	232
4. Subordination under Stratified Superordinates	234
(A) CONTACT BETWEEN TOP AND BOTTOM OF THE STRATIFICATION SYSTEM	234
(B) TRANSMISSION OF PRESSURE	236
(C) SEPARATION BETWEEN TOP AND BOTTOM OF THE STRATIFICATION SYSTEM	237
5. The Phenomenon of Outvoting	239
IV. SUBORDINATION UNDER A PRINCIPLE	250
1. Subordination under a Principle vs. a Person	250
2. Subordination under Objects	253
3. Conscience	254
4. Society and "Objectivity"	256
5. The Effect of Subordination under a Principle upon the Relations between Superordination and Subordinates	261
V. SUPERORDINATION AND SUBORDINATION AND DEGREES OF DOMINATION AND FREEDOM	268
1. Superordination without Subordinates	268
2. Superordination in Lieu of Freedom	273
3. The Sociological Error of Socialism and Anarchism	282
4. Super-Subordination without Degradation	283
5. Coordination and Reciprocal Super-Subordination	286
6. Super-Subordination as a Form of Social Organization and as an Expression of Individual Differences; Person vs. Position	291
7. Aristocracy vs. Equality	295
8. Coercion	298

9. The Inevitably Disproportionate Distribution of Qualifications and Positions	300
---	-----

PART FOUR: The Secret and the Secret Society

I. KNOWLEDGE, TRUTH, AND FALSEHOOD IN HUMAN RELATIONS	307
1. Knowledge of One Another	307
2. Knowledge of External Nature vs. Knowledge of Persons	309
3. Truth, Error, and Social Life	310
4. The Individual as an Object of Knowledge	310
5. The Nature of the Psychic Process and of Communication	311
6. The Lie	312
II. TYPES OF SOCIAL RELATIONSHIPS BY DEGREES OF RECIPROCAL KNOWLEDGE OF THEIR PARTICIPANTS	317
1. Interest Groups	317
2. Confidence under More and Less Complex Conditions	318
3. "Acquaintance"	320
4. Discretion	320
5. Friendship and Love	324
6. Marriage	326
III. SECRECY	330
1. The Role of the Secret in Social Life	330
2. The Fascination of Secrecy	332
3. The Fascination of Betrayal	333
4. Secrecy and Individualization	334
5. Adornment	338
IV. THE SECRET SOCIETY	345
1. Protection and Confidence	345
2. Silence	349
3. Written Communication	352
4. Secrecy and Sociation	355

xvi Contents

5. Hierarchy	356
6. Ritual	358
7. Freedom	360
8. Features of the Secret Society as Quantitative Modifications of General Group Features	361
(A) SEPARATENESS, FORMALITY, CONSCIOUSNESS	362
(B) EXCLUSION: SIGNS OF RECOGNITION	363
(C) THE ARISTOCRATIC MOTIVE; ARISTOCRACY	364
(D) DEGREES OF INITIATION: FORMAL AND MATERIAL SEPARATION FROM THE OUTSIDE	366
(E) GROUP EGOISM	367
(F) INCLUSIVENESS AND EXCLUSIVENESS AS GROUP PRINCIPLES	368
(G) SECLUSION FROM THE OUTSIDE AND INTERNAL COHESION	369
(H) CENTRALIZATION	370
(I) DE-INDIVIDUALIZATION	372
(J) EQUALITY OF MEMBERS	374
(K) THE SECRET SOCIETY AND CENTRAL GOVERNMENT	375
PART FIVE: Faithfulness and Gratitude; Negativity of Collective Behavior; the Stranger; Metropolis
I. FAITHFULNESS AND GRATITUDE	379
II. THE NEGATIVE CHARACTER OF COLLECTIVE BEHAVIOR	396
III. THE STRANGER	402
IV. THE METROPOLIS AND MENTAL LIFE	409
INDEX	427