

Contents

1 Introduction: Society as Artifact	page	1
2 The Conditional and the Unconditional		18
3 The Idea of the Transformative Vocation: A First Point of Departure		26
4 Credible Ideals and Transformative Insight: A Second Point of Departure		36
5 The Constraints on Transformative Action: A Third Point of Departure		48
Facing False Necessity		48
The Disappointments of Transformative Practice		48
A Limiting Case of Social Closure		49
The Instruments of Closure: The Oligarchy Effect		49
The Instruments of Closure: The Identity Effect		50
The Instruments of Closure: The Survival Effect		51
Emancipation from False Necessity		52
The Sources of Emancipation: Mass Politics		52
The Sources of Emancipation: World History		56
The Sources of Emancipation: Enlarged Economic Rationality		59
The Quality of Partial Emancipation		60
The Puzzles of Partial Emancipation from False Necessity		61
Unexplained Routine		61
Interrupted Dissociation		63
Experiences of Blockage and Opportunity		64
The Exemplary Instability of the Third World		64
A Brazilian Example		67
6 The Circumstance of Social Theory: A Fourth Point of Departure		80
Society as Made and Imagined		80

The Broader Intellectual Context: The Rejection of Self-Evident and Unconditional Knowledge	80
The Failure to Rescue the Ideal of Unconditional Knowledge	82
From the Rejection of the Ideal of Unconditional Knowledge to the Abandonment of the Naturalistic View of Society	84
Deep-Structure Social Theory	87
The Distinction Between Routines and Frameworks	88
Particular Frameworks as Instances of General Types	90
General Types as Subjects of Lawlike Explanations	91
The Limits of Deep-Structure Analysis	92
Deep-Structure Analysis and Functional Explanation	93
Marxism as an Evolutionary Deep-Structure Social Theory	96
The Two-Sided Relation of Marxism to Deep-Structure Analysis	96
Marxist Theory and Leftist Parties	98
The Core Problem of Indeterminacy	99
The Troubles of the Concept of Capitalism	101
The Sources of Difficulty	109
Playing up Politics: The Failure to Rescue the Theory from Within	113
The Practical Significance of Theoretical Error	117
Economics as a Nonevolutionary Deep-Structure Social Theory	120
A First Statement of the Problem	129
Positivist Social Science and Naive Historiography	130
The Avoidance of Context	130
Techniques of Avoidance	133
A Second Statement of the Problem: History Without a Script	135
Trouble with the Script: The Shared Embarrassments of Deep-Structure Social Theory and Positivist Social Science	135
The Modest Eclectic Response	139
Objections to the Modest Eclectic Response	141
Beyond Modest Eclecticism	143
The Reinterpretation of Constraint	144
Making Sense of the Slogan “It’s All Politics”: Toward a Radically Antinaturalistic Social Theory	151
Themes of a Theory	151
Practical Implications	159

Two Ways to Develop the Idea that Everything Is Politics: Super-Theory and Ultra-Theory	165
7 The Philosophical and Scientific Setting of an Antinaturalistic Social Theory	170
Turning the Scientific Prejudice Upside Down	170
Necessity and Contingency	172
The Thesis Stated	172
The Limiting Case of Extreme Necessitarianism	174
The Empirical Revision of Conceptions of Necessity: A Cosmological Example	177
The Thesis Generalized	180
Historical Particularity and General Explanations	185
The Problem Introduced	185
Historical Particularity as a Challenge to General Explanation: Examples from Natural History	187
The Explanatory Advantages of Weakened Constraint	192
8 Conclusion: The Radical Project and the Criticism of False Necessity	200
Bibliographical Notes	216
Proper-Name Index	241
Thematic Index	243