

Contents

Preface	x
Abbreviations	xvii
Introduction	1
The Heidegger Affair, 4 Heidegger's Reorientation of the Tradition, 8 Descartes's Obstinate Legacy for Feminist and Race Theory, 10 Historical Consciousness and Social Change, 16 The Need to Rethink Time and History, 23 The Metaphysical Paradox of Time and Being, 25 An Overview of Levinas's Critique of Heidegger on Time, 27
1. Ontological Difference, Sexual Difference, and Time	37
Two Freedoms, Two Moralities . . . Two Registers of Language, 43 Interruption, 46 Dwelling with the Feminine in Totality and Infinity , 58 Philosophy as Critique, 60 Accomplishment, Constitution, Conditioning, 61 The Temporality of Representation: After the Event, 68
2. Heidegger and Feminism: Bodies, Others, Temporality	75
Bodies and Materiality, 77 Others in the World of Dasein, 95 Temporality and History, 108
3. Heidegger's Critique of Metaphysical Presence	123
4. The Temporality of Saying: Politics Beyond the Ontological Difference	140
The Trajectory of Levinas's Analysis of Temporality, 143 The Saying and the Said, 145 Not Yet Time: The Paradox of the Instant, 147 Heidegger on Death, Time, and Others, 157 Politics, 162

5. Giving Time and Death: Levinas, Heidegger, and the Trauma of the Gift	170
6. Impossible Possibility: Thinking Ethics After Levinas with Rosenzweig and Heidegger in the Wake of the Shoah Rosenzweig on Creation, Revelation, and Redemption, 193 Death and the Totality of History, 197 Death as Fundamental, 199 Thinking After Levinas, 206	189
7. A Mourning of Philosophy: Levinas's Legacy as Traumatic Response	209
8. The Betrayal of Philosophy Levinas's Language, 224 The Alternating Movement of Philosophy, 227 Ambivalence, Ambiguity, and Absorption, 228 Interruption, 229 An Abuse of Language, 230 An Event That Cannot Be Named, 232 Subversion of Essence, 233 Everything Shows Itself, 234 Contradiction, 235 The Third Party, 236	224
Conclusion: The Lapse of Time and of the Feminine Irreducible Diachrony, 242 Material Conditionality, 244 The Politics of the Feminine, 245	241
Notes	263