

CONTENTS

I

THE PROBLEM, page 1

- |     |  |               |
|-----|--|---------------|
| 1.1 | How ought one to Approach the Problem? | page 3 |
| 1.2 | The Traditional Method                 | 5             |

PART I. THE TRADITIONAL APPROACHES

2

THE OBJECTIVE APPROACH, page 9

- |     |  |    |
|-----|--|----|
| 2.1 | Three Types of Property                    | 10 |
| 2.2 | Simple Qualities                           | 13 |
| 2.3 | Complex Qualities                          | 16 |
| 2.4 | Is Goodness a Directly-Perceived Property? | 18 |
| 2.5 | The Scope of Ethical Disagreements         | 19 |
| 2.6 | Is Goodness a 'Non-natural' Property?      | 21 |
| 2.7 | Goodness not a Directly-Perceived Property | 23 |
| 2.8 | The Sources of the Objective Doctrine      | 25 |

3

THE SUBJECTIVE APPROACH, page 29

- |     |  |    |
|-----|--|----|
| 3.1 | Subjective Relations   | 30 |
| 3.2 | Are Ethical Concepts Subjective Relations?                     | 32 |
| 3.3 | The Variations in Ethical Standards                            | 33 |
| 3.4 | The Theory of Attitudes  | 35 |
| 3.5 | The Fatal Weakness of the Subjective Approach                  | 37 |
| 3.6 | The Deceptively Scientific Air of this Theory                  | 39 |
| 3.7 | The Common Source of the Objective and SubjectiveDoctrines | 41 |
| 3.8 | The Deeper Sources of these Fallacies                          | 43 |

4

THE IMPERATIVE APPROACH, page 46

- |     |   |    |
|-----|---|----|
| 4.1 | The Rhetorical Force of Ethical Judgements        | 46 |
| 4.2 | The Impossibility of Disputing about Exclamations | 50 |
| 4.3 | Are Ethical Sentences Ejaculations?               | 51 |
| 4.4 | The Weaknesses of the Imperative Approach         | 52 |

4.5	The Sources of the Imperative Doctrine	page 54
4.6	The Apparent Cynicism of the Imperative Doctrine	57
4.7	Conclusion	60

5

INTERLUDE: A CHANGE OF METHOD, page 61

5.1	Vale...	61
5.2	...et Salve	63

PART II. LOGIC AND LIFE

6

REASONING AND ITS USES, page 67

6.1	Widening the Problem: What is 'Reasoning'?	67
6.2	'Gerundive' Concepts	70
6.3	Philosophical Theories of Truth	72
6.4	The 'Correspondence' Theory of Truth	74
6.5	Correspondence and 'Description'	77
6.6	Playing with Words	81
6.7	The Versatility of Reason	82
6.8	A New Approach to Our Problem	83

7

EXPERIENCE AND EXPLANATION, page 86

7.1	The Desire for an Explanation	86
7.2	Explanation and Expectation	87
7.3	The Scientific Limitations of Everyday Concepts	89
7.4	The Development of Scientific Theories and Concepts. (I)	91
7.5	The Development of Scientific Theories and Concepts. (II)	93
7.6	The Scope of Scientific Explanation	95
7.7	The 'Justification' of Science	98

8

REASONING AND REALITY, page 102

8.1	'Modes of Reasoning'	102
8.2	The Concept of 'Reality'	104
8.3	'Reality' and Explanation	105
8.4	The Limits of 'Physical Reality'. (I)	107

8.5	The Limits of 'Physical Reality'. (II)	page 108
8.6	The Limits of 'Physical Reality'. (III)	110
8.7	The Contrast between Scientific and Everyday Judgements	112
8.8	The Independence of Different Modes of Reasoning	113
8.9	More Unnecessary Work for Philosophy	115

PART III. THE NATURE OF ETHICS

9

INTRODUCTION: IS ETHICS A SCIENCE? page 121

9.1	Physical and Moral 'Reality'	122
9.2	'Disposition' and the Function of Ethics	125
9.3	Conclusion	129

10

THE FUNCTION AND DEVELOPMENT OF ETHICS, page 130

10.1	The Question at Issue	130
10.2	The Notion of 'Duty'	132
10.3	The Development of Ethics. (I)	137
10.4	The Development of Ethics. (II)	140

11

THE LOGIC OF MORAL REASONING, page 144

11.1	Questions about the Rightness of Actions	144
11.2	Reasoning about the Rightness of Actions	145
11.3	Conflicts of Duties	146
11.4	Reasoning about the Justice of Social Practices	148
11.5	The Two Kinds of Moral Reasoning	150
11.6	The Limited Scope of Comparisons between Social Practices	152
11.7	The Limits to the Analysis of Ethical Concepts	154
11.8	The Limits to Questions about the Rightness of Actions	155
11.9	Is any 'Justification' of Ethics Needed?	160
11.10	Reason and Self-Love	163

12

ETHICS AND SOCIETY, page 166

12.1	Ethics and Language	166
12.2	Equity in Moral Reasoning	168

12.3	Self-Command in Ethics	page 169
12.4	Ethics and Social Institutions	170
12.5	Ethics and Engineering	172
12.6	Ethics and Psychology	174
12.7	The Task of the Moralist	177

PART IV. THE BOUNDARIES OF REASON

13

PHILOSOPHICAL ETHICS, page 185

13.1	Stocktaking	185
13.2	Return to Philosophical Ethics	187
13.3	The Compatibility of Opposed 'Ethical Theories'	189
13.4	Ethical Theories as Disguised Comparisons	190
13.5	Theory and Description in Philosophical Ethics	193
13.6	Ethical Theories as Rhetoric	195
13.7	Ethical Theories: Rhetoric and Reason	199

14

REASON AND FAITH, page 202

14.1	The Finite Scope of Reasoning	202
14.2	'Limiting' Questions	204
14.3	The Peculiarities of 'Limiting Questions'	205
14.4	The Importance of 'Limiting Questions'	209
14.5	Matters of Faith	212
14.6	Spiritual and Literal Interpretations	215
14.7	Faith and Reason in Ethics	217
14.8	The Independence of Ethics and Religion	219

15

SUMMARY AND EPILOGUE, page 222

INDEX, page 226