

Contents

---

Preface	vii
Introduction	1
1 The Concept of Ideology	28
Ideology and the Ideologues	29
Marx's Conceptions of Ideology	33
From Ideology to the Sociology of Knowledge	44
Rethinking Ideology: A Critical Conception	52
Reply to Some Possible Objections	67
2 Ideology in Modern Societies	74
A Critical Analysis of Some Theoretical Accounts
Ideology and the Modern Era	76
Ideology and Social Reproduction	85
The Critique of the Culture Industry	97
The Transformation of the Public Sphere	109
3 The Concept of Culture	122
Culture and Civilization	124
Anthropological Conceptions of Culture	127
Rethinking Culture: A Structural Conception	135
The Social Contextualization of Symbolic Forms	146
The Valorization of Symbolic Forms	154

4 Cultural Transmission and Mass Communication	163
The Development of the Media Industries
Aspects of Cultural Transmission	164
Writing, Printing and the Rise of the Trade in News	171
The Development of Broadcasting	182
Recent Trends in the Media Industries	193
The Social Impact of New Communication Technologies	205
5 Towards a Social Theory of Mass Communication	216
Some Characteristics of Mass Communication	218
Mass Communication and Social Interaction	225
Reconstituting the Boundaries between Public and Private Life	238
Mass Communication between Market and State	248
Rethinking Ideology in the Era of Mass Communication	264
6 The Methodology of Interpretation	272
Some Hermeneutical Conditions of Social-Historical Inquiry	274
The Methodological Framework of Depth Hermeneutics	277
The Interpretation of Ideology	291
Analysing Mass Communication: The Tripartite Approach	303
The Everyday Appropriation of Mass-Mediated Products	313
Interpretation, Self-Reflection and Critique	320
Conclusion: Critical Theory and Modern Societies	328
Notes	332
Index	353