Prefatory Note ix

Acknowledgments xiii

Part One. The Governing Grid

1. THE DOMINANT MYTH 3

The formula for classic liberalism confines political action to the promotion of private interests.

2. THE INSTITUTIONAL FRAME 18

The prevailing mythology sustains a corporate technological structure that isolates individuals and suppresses unacknowledged community needs.

3. THE SEARCH FOR A WORKABLE MYTH 34

While contemporary troubles provide an opportunity for renewal, current pleas for change remain politically sterile.

Part Two. The Promise of the Artist as Actor

4. REDEEMING THE REACTION TO LIBERALISM 51

Reactions to liberalism can be salvaged by acknowledging repressed political dimensions.

5. THE MODEL OF ROMANTICISM 56

An open-ended aesthetics that validates projects relating absolutes promises a new political theory.

6. ART AS POLITICAL ACTION	74
An open-ended politics is prefigured in artistic performances.
Part Three. Implementing a Political Aesthetics
7. DIRECTIVES FOR ACTION	91
To bring absolutes into a state of relationship, political action must be playful, experimental, and localized.
8. THEATERS OF OPERATION	100
Once demystified, conventional institutions become arenas for action.
9. REVOLUTION	125
The world as stage for people in an ongoing process of exchanging roles is the ultimate expression of the postliberal myth.
