

Contents

Preface

xiii

PART ONE

An Outline of Ethical Relativism

I	The Person and the Group	3
1	Harmony and conflict	3
2	Conformity to principles	7
3	Conceptions of the person	9
4	The social person	12
II	Ethical Naturalism	15
1	Self-interest and enlightened self-interest	15
2	Group interest and selflessness	17
3	The postulates of ethical naturalism	20
4	Choosing among principles	23
III	Are there Ethical Absolutes?	28
1	What are absolutes?	28
2	The ethical as the final arbiter	32
3	Ethical relativism	34
4	Objectivity	38
IV	The Role of Values in History	41
1	Stability and change	41
2	Imposed and latent consciousness	46
3	Class and domination	48
4	Sex and class	51

PART TWO

A Critique of Ethical Absolutism

V	Reason and Utility	57
1	Utilitarianism in outline	57
2	Satisfaction	59
3	Desires	62
4	Social feelings	64

VI	Contract and Self-Interest	68
1	Contract theory in outline	68
2	Free and equal persons	70
3	Free enterprise and freedom	73
4	Human nature and the state of nature	76
VII	The Mutable Imperative	79
1	Deontology and teleology	80
2	How consequences affect principles	82
3	Toleration and pluralism	85
4	Fascism and intolerance	88

PART THREE

A Social Conception of Human Nature

VIII	Morals and Universal Natures	93
1	Laws and natures	93
2	The devil theory	96
3	Basic survival needs	100
4	Human nature as freedom	103
IX	How Groups Change Individuals	106
1	Groups as concrete particulars	106
2	Patterning needs	109
3	Classes and roles	112
4	Satisfaction without conflict	116
X	Alienation and Obligation	120
1	Historical needs	120
2	Alienation	123
3	Obligation	126
4	Survival needs and absolute morality	129
XI	Overcoming Imposed Consciousness	133
1	Historical materialism	133
2	Conflict within the person	136
3	Struggle as a methodology	140
4	Intellectuals of the ruling class	144

PART FOUR

An Account of the Conditions of Human Action

XII	Virtue and the Good	149
1	Virtue and role	149
2	The social content of the good	151
3	The primacy of feeling	154
4	Universal virtues	157

XIII	Causes, Ends and Motives	160
1	Causes of human action	160
2	The beginning of ends	162
3	Virtues as motives	166
4	Fatalism	168
XIV	Choice and Deliberation	171
1	Means and ends	171
2	Principles of choice	172
3	Social nature of rationality	177
4	Choice as endeavour	181
XV	Philosophical Freedom	184
1	Is choice uncaused?	184
2	Freedom as a capacity for action	187
3	Voluntary action and alien needs	191
4	Responsibility and morality	194
PART FIVE
A Prospectus for a Theory of Rights
XVI	Social Freedom	201
1	Individualist freedom	201
2	Freedom and social change	203
3	Free speech and the class struggle	205
4	The relevance of time to the denial of free speech	208
XVII	Equal Rights	212
1	Equality in historical perspective	212
2	The extent of equality	216
3	The class basis for equality	218
4	Equal national rights	220
XVIII	Economic Justice	224
1	Economic inequality	224
2	Ownership and productivity	227
3	A fair wage	231
4	A just distribution	233
XIX	Rights and Social Structure	238
1	The interdependence of needs	239
2	The need for social entities	241
3	Social entities as a basis for rights	244
4	The rights of working people	246

XX	Revolutionary Ethics	250
1	Reform and revolutionary rights	250
2	Social change and absolutism	254
3	Socialism and democracy	257
4	Ethics without class	259
Index		263