

Contents

Preface	ix
Introduction	1
1. Human Rights as a Metaphor	10
The Metaphor of Human Rights	10
The Grand Narrative of Human Rights	15
The Metaphor of the Savage	22
The Metaphor of the Victim	27
The Metaphor of the Savior	31
2. Human Rights as an Ideology	39
The Authors of Human Rights	39
A Holy Trinity: Liberalism, Democracy, and Human Rights	44
The Conventional Doctrinalists	47
The Conceptualizers	56
The Cultural Pluralists	64
Political Strategists and Instrumentalists	67
3. Human Rights and the African Fingerprint	71
Africa in a Rights Universe	71
Human Rights in Precolonial Africa	74
The Dialectic of Rights and Duties	82
The Duty/Rights Conception	84
Whither Africa?	92
4. Human Rights, Religion, and Proselytism	94
The Problem of Religious Rights	94
Demonizing the “Other”	98

viii Contents

Proselytization in Africa	100
The Legal Invisibility of Indigenous Religions	103
Ideals Versus Realities	106
The Moral Equivalency of Cultures	109
5. The African State, Human Rights, and Religion	112
Religion and African Statehood	112
Identity Disorientation	114
The Culture of Silence and Postcolonialism	117
Counterpenetration as a Farce	121
Benin Returns to Its Roots	124
6. The Limits of Rights Discourse	126
South Africa: The Human Rights State	126
The Rights Framework as an ANC Strategy: A Snapshot of Apartheid	130
The Evolution of a Rights Approach	132
The Compromise of the Interim Constitution	134
The 1996 Constitution as a Normative Continuum	137
The ANC's Gradualist Rights Approach	140
Land Reform as a Central Plank of the Struggle	142
Women in Post-Apartheid South Africa	144
The Status and Orientation of Post-Apartheid Courts	146
Humanizing the Instruments of Coercion	149
Rights Discourse—Not a Panacea	150
Conclusion	154
Notes	159
Index	237
Acknowledgments	251