

CONTENTS

| | |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------|
| Acknowledgements | ix |
| 1 HUMAN WELL-BEING AND THE NATURAL WORLD | 1 |
| 2 NATURE, INTRINSIC VALUE AND HUMAN WELL-BEING | 8 |
| 2.1 The varieties of intrinsic value | 8 |
| 2.2 Sources and objects of value | 10 |
| 2.3 Values and non-relational properties | 13 |
| 2.4 Objective value and the natural world | 15 |
| 2.5 Intrinsic value and human well-being | 22 |
| 3 FUTURE GENERATIONS AND THE HARMS WE DO OURSELVES | 26 |
| 3.1 Future generations, present harms | 28 |
| 3.2 Hedonism and the temporally local perspective | 36 |
| 3.3 The market and the temporally local perspective | 38 |
| 4 THE CONSTITUENCY OF ENVIRONMENTAL POLICY | 44 |
| 4.1 Cost-benefit analysis: an outline | 44 |
| 4.2 The constituency of policy | 46 |
| 4.3 Discounting the future | 49 |
| 4.4 Cost-benefit analysis and the inarticulate | 59 |
| 5 JUSTIFYING COST-BENEFIT ANALYSIS: ARGUMENTS FROM WELFARE | 62 |
| 5.1 Justifying cost-benefit analysis | 62 |
| 5.2 Welfare justifications | 65 |
| 5.3 Cost-benefit analysis, science and argument | 68 |
| 5.4 Reason, preference and environmental goods | 76 |
| 5.5 Ideals, preferences and elitism | 81 |

CONTENTS

| | |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| 6 PLURALISM, LIBERALISM AND THE GOOD LIFE | 83 |
| 6.1 Liberalism and the good life | 83 |
| 6.2 Aristotle, the good life and self-sufficiency | 85 |
| 6.3 Pluralism: goods and beliefs | 90 |
| 6.4 Rational argument, pluralism and convergence | 92 |
| 6.5 Mill and the classical conception of politics | 95 |
| 6.6 Some qualifications: ecology, aesthetics and diversity | 98 |
| 7 PLURALISM, INCOMMENSURABILITY, JUDGEMENT | 102 |
| 7.1 Values: incommensurability, incomparability, indeterminacy | 102 |
| 7.2 Environmental values: description, appraisal and pluralism | 107 |
| 7.3 Cost-benefit analysis and incommensurability | 110 |
| 7.4 Incommensurability, transitivity and judgement | 111 |
| 7.5 Two accounts of practical reason | 115 |
| 7.6 Willingness to pay: commodities and commensurability | 118 |
| 8 AUTHORITY, DEMOCRACY AND THE ENVIRONMENT | 123 |
| 8.1 Authority: between 'rationalism' and irrationality | 124 |
| 8.2 Two forms of authority | 126 |
| 8.3 Two problems of authority | 131 |
| 8.4 The limits of authority and the tools of scepticism | 135 |
| 9 SCIENCE, POLICY AND ENVIRONMENTAL VALUE | 145 |
| 9.1 Science: necessary, reliable, but insufficient | 145 |
| 9.2 Against greens against science | 148 |
| 9.3 Autonomy, value and science | 155 |
| 9.4 Science, wonder and the lust of the eyes | 159 |
| 10 MARKET, HOUSEHOLD AND POLITICS | 168 |
| 10.1 Household and market | 168 |
| 10.2 Household, politics and non-market associations | 171 |
| 10.3 The market in its place? | 174 |
| 10.4 The market, civil society and totalitarianism | 177 |
| 10.5 Non-market associations and environmental goods | 179 |
| Notes | 182 |
| Bibliography | 209 |
| Index | 220 |