

CONTENTS

Preface and Acknowledgments	ix
Abbreviations Used in Text and Notes	xv
Introduction The Critical Theory of Society: Between Practical Philosophy and Social Science	1
PART I THE ORIGINS OF CRITIQUE
Chapter One The Origins of Immanent Critique	19
1 Hegelian Origins
2 Hegel's Methodological and Normative Critique of Natural Right Theories
3 Marxian Transformation: Critique of Mere Criticism in the pre-1844 period
Chapter Two The Origins of Defetishizing Critique	44
1 Hegelian Origins: The Phenomenological Method
2 The Presuppositions of the Phenomenological Method: Constitutive Activity as Labor
3 The Anthropological Transformation of the Phenomenological Method in the 1844 Manuscripts
Chapter Three Integrating Crisis: Autonomy and Ethical Life	70
1 Hegel's Critique of Kant's Moral Philosophy
2 Expressivist Action and the Transsubjective Ideal of Freedom
3 Integrating Crisis: Healing the Wounds of the Ethical
Chapter Four Critique as Crisis Theory: Autonomy and Capitalism	102
1 The Three Levels of Critique in Marx's Capital
2 Fetishism and Emancipation
3 Systemic and Lived Crisis: The Unresolved Tension
4 Concluding Systematic Considerations to Part I: Self-Actualizing Activity and the Philosophy of the Subject

PART II THE TRANSFORMATION OF CRITIQUE
Chapter Five	The Critique of Instrumental Reason 147
1	From the Critique of Political Economy to the Critique of Instrumental Reason
2	The Critique of Instrumental Reason and its Aporias
Appendix	Lukács, Weber, and the Frankfurt School
Chapter Six	Autonomy as Mimetic Reconciliation 186
1	Autonomy and Self-Preservation (Selbsterhaltung)
2	Autonomy and Reconciliation with the "Other"
3	Concluding Systematic Considerations: The Critique of Instrumental Reason and the Philosophy of the Subject
Chapter Seven	The Critique of Functionalist Reason 224
1	Communicative Action and the Paradoxes of Rationalization
2	Communicative Reason and the Integrity of Modernity
Chapter Eight	Toward a Communicative Ethics and Autonomy 279
1	The Program of Communicative Ethics
2	The Hegelian Objection: A Contemporary Reformulation
3	Communicative Autonomy and Utopia
4	Concluding Reflections: Beyond the Philosophy of the Subject
	Notes 355
	Bibliography 411
	Index 435