

Contents

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS	xi
INTRODUCTION	xiii
I. THE STATE, POWER AND AUTHORITY	1
I. The Public Official	2
II. Private and Public	4
III. Power	9
IV. Authoritative Power	15
V. Coercive Power	19
VI. Mills' Power Elite	21
VII. Social Control and Integration	26
VIII. The State	31
II. THE LEGITIMATE STATE	38
Moral Obligation	40
I. Legitimation	41
II. Three Types of Theory	44
III. Natural Law	45
IV. Natural Rights and the Contract	49
V. The General Will	56
VI. Rawls' Theory of Political Obligation	57
VII. Ought and Duty	65
VIII. Wolff's Philosophical Anarchism	72
IX. What If There Were No De Facto
X. Authorities?	76

III.	THE LIBERAL STATE	91
	I. Origins of the Liberal State	93
	II. Contracts and Market Morality: Hobbes	98
	III. Locke and the Natural Right to Property	104
	IV. The Criticism of Rousseau	109
	V. The Criticism of Marx	118
	VI. Freedom and Capitalism	131
IV.	THE DEMOCRATIC STATE	144
	I. Democracy in Greek Political Theory	145
	II. Rule of the People	147
	III. Forms of the Polis in Aristotle	148
	IV. Rule of Law and Tyranny	152
	V. Liberalism and Democracy	154
	VI. Locke on Democracy	155
	VII. American Republicanism	159
	VIII. Rousseau and Democracy	166
	IX. Class and Democracy in Karl Marx	170
	X. Contemporary Liberal Democracy	175
V.	THE LIBERAL MORAL IDEAL	194
	I. Liberty and Its Value	195
	II. Liberal Freedom and Conservative Freedom	196
	III. The Conservative Moral Ideal	198
	IV. The Dilemma of Freedom	201
	V. The Liberal Response	203
	VI. Human Nature and Society	205
	VII. Education and the Good	207
	VIII. Justification of the Liberal Principle	211
	IX. The Presumption in Favor of Liberty	215
	X. The Moral Limits of Freedom	216

XI. The Violation of Distinct and Assignable Obligations	219
XII. Perceptible Hurt and the Idea of Violence	220
XIII. Perceptible Hurt to Assignable Individuals: Crimes Without Victims and Free Speech	224
XIV. Paternalism	226
XV. Freedom and Taxation	232
VI. THE DEMOCRATIC COMMUNITY	242
I. The Positive and Negative Critique of Unfreedom	242
II. The Idea of the Democratic Community	246
III. The Real World and the Ideal of the Democratic Community	250
INDEX	259