
Contents

Translator's Preface	vii
Author's Preface	xi
Afterword to the Second German Edition (1988)	xiii
I The Incapacity for Social Analysis: Aporias of Critical Theory
Introduction	3
1 Horkheimer's Original Idea: The Sociological Deficit of Critical Theory	5
2 The Turn to the Philosophy of History in the Dialectic of Enlightenment : A Critique of the Domination of Nature	32
3 Adorno's Theory of Society: The Definitive Repression of the Social	57
II The Rediscovery of the Social: Foucault and Habermas
Introduction	99
4 Foucault's Historical Analysis of Discourse: The Paradoxes of a Semiological Approach to the History of Knowledge	105

5 From the Analysis of Discourse to the Theory of Power: Struggle as the Paradigm of the Social	149
6 Foucault's Theory of Society: A Systems-Theoretic Dissolution of the Dialectic of Enlightenment	176
7 Habermas' Anthropology of Knowledge: The Theory of Knowledge-Constitutive Interests	203
8 Two Competing Models of the History of the Species: Understanding as the Paradigm of the Social	240
9 Habermas' Theory of Society: A Transformation of the Dialectic of Enlightenment in Light of the Theory of Communication	278
Notes	305
Index	335