Volume One: THE OBJECTIVE LOGIC

PREFACE TO THE FIRST EDITION		25
PREFACE TO THE SECOND EDITION		31
INTRODUCTION: GENERAL NOTION OF LOGIC		43
GENERAL DIVISION OF LOGIC		59

BOOK ONE: THE DOCTRINE OF BEING

With What Must the Science begin?		67
General Division of Being		79
Section One: Determinateness (Quality)		81
Chapter 1 Being		82
A Being		82
B Nothing		82
C Becoming		82
1. Unity of Being and Nothing		82
Remark 1: The Opposition of Being and Nothing in Ordinary Thinking		83
Remark 2: Defectiveness of the Expression: Unity, Identity of Being and Nothing		90
Remark 3: The Isolating of These Abstractions		93
Remark 4: Incomprehensibility of the Beginning		103
2. Moments of Becoming: Coming-to-be and Ceasing-to-be		103
3. Sublation of Becoming		106
Remark: The Expression 'To Sublate'		106
 Chapter 2 Determinate Being		 109
A Determinate Being as Such		109
(a) Determinate Being in General		109
(b) Quality		111
Remark: Quality and Negation		111
(c) Something		114
B Finitude		116
(a) Something and Other		117
(b) Determination, Constitution and Limit		122
(c) Finitude		129
(α) The Immediacy of Finitude		129

(β) Limitation and the Ought	131
Remark: The Ought	133
(γ) Transition of the Finite into the Infinite	136
c Infinity	137
(a) The Infinite in General	137
(b) Alternating Determination of the Finite and the Infinite	138
(c) Affirmative Infinity	143
Transition	150
Remark 1: The Infinite Progress	150
Remark 2: Idealism	154
Chapter 3 Being-for-self	157
A Being-for-self as such	157
(a) Determinate Being and Being-for-self	158
(b) Being-for-one	159
Remark: The German Expression, 'What for a Thing' (Meaning 'What Kind of a Thing')	160
(c) The One	163
B The One and the Many	164
(a) The One in its Own Self	164
(b) The One and the Void	165
Remark: Atomism	165
(c) Many Ones—Repulsion	167
Remark: The Monad of Leibniz	169
C Repulsion and Attraction	170
(a) Exclusion of the One	170
Remark: The Unity of the One and the Many	172
(b) The one One of Attraction	173
(c) The Relation of Repulsion and Attraction	174
Remark: The Kantian Construction of Matter from the Forces of Attraction and Repulsion	178
Section Two: Magnitude (Quantity)	185
Remark	186
Chapter 1 Quantity	187
A Pure Quantity	187
Remark 1: The Conception of Pure Quantity	188
Remark 2: The Kantian Antinomy of the Indivisibility and the Infinite Divisibility of Time, Space and Matter	190
B Continuous and Discrete Magnitude	199
Remark: The Usual Separation of These Magnitudes	200
C Limitation of Quantity	201

Chapter 2	Quantum	202
A	Number	202
	Remark 1: The Species of Calculation in Arithmetic, Kant's Synthetic Propositions A Priori of Intuition	204
	Remark 2: The Employment of Numerical Distinctions for Expressing Philosophical Notions	212
B	Extensive and Intensive Quantum	217
	(a) Their Difference	217
	(b) Identity of Extensive and Intensive Magnitude	220
	Remark 1: Examples of this Identity	221
	Remark 2: The Determination of Degree as Applied by Kant to the Soul	223
	(c) Alteration of Quantum	224
C	Quantitative Infinity	225
	(a) Its Notion	225
	(b) The Quantitative Infinite Progress	227
	Remark 1: The High Repute of the Progress to Infinity	228
	Remark 2: The Kantian Antinomy of the Limita- tion and Non-limitation of the World in Time and Space	234
	(c) The Infinity of Quantum	238
	Remark 1: The Specific Nature of the Notion of the Mathematical Infinite	240
	Remark 2: The Purpose of the Differential Calculus Deduced from its Application	274
	Remark 3: Further Forms Connected with the Qualitative Determinateness of Mag- nitude	302
Chapter 3	The Quantitative Relation or Quantitative Ratio	314
A	The Direct Ratio	315
B	Inverse Ratio	317
C	The Ratio of Powers	321
	Remark	324
Section Three: Measure		327
Chapter 1	Specific Quantity	332
A	The Specific Quantum	332
B	Specifying Measure	336
	(a) The Rule	337
	(b) Specifying Measure	337
	Remark	338
	(c) Relation of the Two Sides as Qualities	339
	Remark	342
C	Being-for-self in Measure	344

Chapter 2	Real Measure	348
A	The Relation of Self-subsistent Measures	349
	(a) Combination of two Measures	349
	(b) Measure as a Series of Measure Relations	351
	(c) Elective Affinity	354
	Remark	356
B	Nodal Line of Measure Relations	366
	Remark	368
C	The Measureless	371
Chapter 3	The Becoming of Essence	375
A	Absolute Indifference	375
B	Indifference as an Inverse Ratio of its Factors	375
	Remark	379
C	Transition into Essence	383
	BOOK TWO: THE DOCTRINE OF ESSENCE	389
	Section One: Essence as Reflection Within Itself	393
Chapter 1	Illusory Being	394
A	The Essential and the Unessential	394
B	Illusory Being	395
C	Reflection	399
	(a) Positing Reflection	400
	(b) External Reflection	403
	Remark	404
	(c) Determining Reflection	405
Chapter 2	The Essentialities or Determinations of Reflection	408
	Remark: Determinations of Reflection in the Form of Propositions	408
A	Identity	411
	Remark 1: Abstract Identity	412
	Remark 2: First Original Law of Thought	413
B	Difference	417
	(a) Absolute Difference	417
	(b) Diversity	418
	Remark: The Law of Diversity	422
	(c) Opposition	424
	Remark: Opposite Magnitudes of Arithmetic	427
C	Contradiction	431
	Remark 1: Unity of Positive and Negative	435
	Remark 2: The Law of the Excluded Middle	438
	Remark 3: The Law of Contradiction	439

Chapter 3 Ground	444
Remark: The Law of Ground	446
A Absolute Ground	447
(a) Form and Essence	447
(b) Form and Matter	450
(c) Form and Content	455
B Determinate Ground	456
(a) Formal Ground	456
Remark: Formal Method of Explanation From Tautological Grounds	458
(b) Real Ground	461
Remark: Formal Method of Explanation From a Ground Distinct From That Which is Grounded	463
(c) The Complete Ground	466
C Condition	469
(a) The Relatively Unconditioned	469
(b) The Absolutely Unconditioned	472
(c) Emergence of the Fact [Sache] into Existence	474
 Section Two: Appearance	 479
 Chapter 1 Existence	 481
A The Thing and its Properties	484
(a) Thing-in-itself and Existence	484
(b) Property	487
Remark: The Thing-in-itself of Transcendental Idealism	489
(c) The Reciprocal Action of Things	490
B The Constitution of the Thing out of Matters	492
C Dissolution of the Thing	494
Remark: The Porosity of Matters	496
 Chapter 2 Appearance	 499
A The Law of Appearance	500
B The World of Appearance and the World-in-itself	505
C Dissolution of Appearance	509
 Chapter 3 The Essential Relation	 512
A The Relation of Whole and Parts	513
Remark: Infinite Divisibility	517
B The Relation of Force and its Expression	518
(a) The Conditionedness of Force	519
(b) The Solicitation of Force	521
(c) The Infinity of Force	523
C Relation of Outer and Inner	523
Remark: Immediate Identity of Inner and Outer	526

Section Three: Actuality	529
Chapter 1 The Absolute	530
A The Exposition of the Absolute	530
B The Absolute Attribute	533
C The Mode of the Absolute	534
Remark: Philosophy of Spinoza and Leibniz	536
Chapter 2 Actuality	541
A Contingency, or Formal Actuality, Possibility, and Necessity	542
B Relative Necessity, or Real Actuality, Possibility, and Necessity	546
C Absolute Necessity	550
Chapter 3 The Absolute Relation	554
A The Relation of Substantiality	555
B The Relation of Causality	558
(a) Formal Causality	558
(b) The Determinate Relation of Causality	560
(c) Action and Reaction	566
C Reciprocity	569

Volume Two: SUBJECTIVE LOGIC or
THE DOCTRINE OF THE NOTION

FOREWORD	575
THE NOTION IN GENERAL	577
DIVISION	596
Section One: Subjectivity	599
Chapter 1 The Notion	600
A The Universal Notion	601
B The Particular Notion	605
Remark: The Common Classes of Notions	612
C The Individual	618
Chapter 2 The Judgement	622
A The Judgement of Existence (Inherence)	630
(a) The Positive Judgement	631
(b) The Negative Judgement	636
(c) The Infinite Judgement	641

B	The Judgement of Reflection	643
	(a) The Singular Judgement	645
	(b) The Particular Judgement	645
	(c) The Universal Judgement	647
c	The Judgement of Necessity	650
	(a) The Categorical Judgement	650
	(b) The Hypothetical Judgement	652
	(c) The Disjunctive Judgement	653
D	The Judgement of the Notion	657
	(a) The Assertoric Judgement	659
	(b) The Problematic Judgement	660
	(c) The Apodeictic Judgement	661
 Chapter 3 The Syllogism		664
A	The Syllogism of Existence	666
	(a) First Figure of the Syllogism	667
	(b) The Second Figure: P-I-U	674
	(c) The Third Figure: I-U-P	677
	(d) The Fourth Figure: U-U-U, or the Mathematical Syllogism	679
	Remark: The Common View of the Syllogism	681
B	The Syllogism of Reflection	686
	(a) The Syllogism of Allness	687
	(b) The Syllogism of Induction	689
	(c) The Syllogism of Analogy	692
c	The Syllogism of Necessity	695
	(a) The Categorical Syllogism	696
	(b) The Hypothetical Syllogism	698
	(c) The Disjunctive Syllogism	701
 Section Two: Objectivity		705
 Chapter 1 Mechanism		711
A	The Mechanical Object	711
B	The Mechanical Process	714
	(a) The Formal Mechanical Process	716
	(b) The Real Mechanical Process	718
	(c) The Product of the Mechanical Process	721
c	Absolute Mechanism	721
	(a) The Centre	721
	(b) Law	724
	(c) Transition of Mechanism	725
 Chapter 2 Chemism		727
A	The Chemical Object	727
B	The Chemical Process	728
c	Transition of Chemism	731

Chapter 3	Teleology	735
A	The Subjective End	740
B	The Means	743
C	The Realized End	745
Section Three: The Idea		755
Chapter 1	Life	761
A	The Living Individual	764
B	The Life Process	769
C	The Genus	772
Chapter 2	The Idea of Cognition	775
A	The Idea of the True	783
(a)	Analytic Cognition	786
(b)	Synthetic Cognition	793
1.	Definition	795
2.	Division	800
3.	The Theorem	806
B	The Idea of the Good	818
Chapter 3	The Absolute Idea	825
