

CONTENTS

	Page
AUTHOR'S PREFACE	v
TRANSLATORS' NOTE	vi
INTRODUCTION	i
 Part One—Imitation
CHAPTER I. THE FIRST THREE STAGES: Absence of imitation, sporadic imitation and beginnings of systematic imitation	6
§ 1. Stage I: Preparation through the reflex.
§ 2. Stage II: Sporadic imitation.
§ 3. Stage III: Systematic imitation of sounds already belonging to the phonation of the child and of movements he has already made and seen.
CHAPTER II. STAGES IV AND V: Imitation of movements not visible on the body of the subject, and imitation of new models	30
§ 1. Stage IV: I. Imitation of movements already made by the child but which are not visible to him.
§ 2. Stage IV: II. Beginning of imitation of new auditory and visual models.
§ 3. Stage V: Systematic imitation of new models including those involving movements invisible to the child.
CHAPTER III. STAGE VI: Beginnings of representative imitation and further development of imitation	62
§ 1. Stage VI: Deferred imitation.
§ 2. Further evolution of imitation. Imitation and the image.
§ 3. Theories of imitation.

	Page
Part Two—Play
CHAPTER IV. THE BEGINNINGS OF PLAY	89
CHAPTER V. CLASSIFICATION OF GAMES AND THEIR EVOLUTION AFTER THE BEGINNINGS OF LANGUAGE	105
§ 1. Critical study of the usual classifications of ludic behaviours.
§ 2. Practice, symbol and rule.
§ 3. Classification and evolution of mere practice games.
§ 4. Classification and evolution of symbolic games.
§ 5. Games with rules and evolution of children's games.
CHAPTER VI. EXPLANATION OF PLAY	147
§ 1. Criteria of play.
§ 2. The theory of pre-exercise.
§ 3. The recapitulation theory.
§ 4. F. J. J. Buytendijk's theory of "infantile dynamics."
§ 5. An attempt to interpret play through the structure of the child's thought.
CHAPTER VII. SECONDARY SYMBOLISM IN PLAY, DREAMS AND "UNCONSCIOUS" SYMBOLISM	169
§ 1. Secondary symbolism in play, and children's dreams.
§ 2. The Freudian explanation of symbolic thought.
§ 3. Symbolism according to Silberer, Adler and Jung.
§ 4. An attempt to explain unconscious symbolism.
§ 5. Unconscious symbolism and affective schemas.
Part Three—Cognitive Representation
CHAPTER VIII. TRANSITION FROM SENSORY-MOTOR SCHEMAS TO CONCEPTUAL SCHEMAS	215
§ 1. First verbal schemas.
§ 2. "Preconcepts."
§ 3. First reasonings: preconceptual reasoning (transductions) and symbolic reasoning.
§ 4. From sensory-motor intelligence to cognitive representation.

CONTENTS

		Page
CHAPTER	IX.	FROM PRACTICAL TO REPRESENTATIVE CATEGORIES	245
		§ 1. Myths of origin and artificialism.
		§ 2a. Animism.
		§ 2b. Decline of artificialism and animism.
		§ 3. Names, dreams and thought.
		§ 4. Magic-phenomenism, reactions related to air and co-ordination of view-points.
		§ 5. Objects, spatial perception and time.
		§ 6. Conclusions: preconcepts, intuition and operations.
CHAPTER	X.	CONCLUSIONS : GENERAL TRENDS OF REPRESENTATIVE ACTIVITY	273
		I. First period: Sensory-motor activity.
		II. Second period: Egocentric representative activity. Stage I: Preconceptual thought.
		III. Second period: Egocentric representative activity. Stage II: Intuitive thought.
		IV. Third period: Operational representative activity.
INDEX			292