Author's Preface to the Second Edition	xxv
Introduction: The Theme and Organization of the Inquiry	1
Section One: The Point of Departure of the Laying of the Foundation of Metaphysics	7
§ 1. The Traditional Concept of Metaphysics	9
§ 2. The Point of Departure for the Laying of the Foundation of Traditional Metaphysics	14
§ 3. The Laying of the Foundation of Metaphysics as a Critique of Pure Reason	18
Section Two: The Carrying Out of the Laying of the Foundation of Metaphysics	23
A. The Characterization of the Dimension in Which the Regression Necessary for the Development of the Laying of the Foundation of Metaphysics Is Carried Out	26
I. The Essential Attributes of the Field of Origin	27
§ 4. The Essence of Knowledge in General	27
§ 5. The Essence of the Finitude of Knowledge	30
§ 6. The Field of Origin of the Laying of the Foundation of Metaphysics	39
II. The Manner in Which the Origin is Revealed	42
§ 7. The Outline of the Stages of the Laying of the Foundation of Ontology	42
§ 8. The Method by Which the Origin is Revealed	44
B. The Stages of the Realization of the Projection of the Intrinsic Possibility of Ontology	46
The First Stage of the Laying of the Foundation: The Essential Elements of Pure Knowledge	47

a) Pure Intuition in Finite Knowledge	48
§ 9. The Elucidation of Space and Time as Pure Intuitions	48
§ 10. Time as the Universal Pure Intuition	51
b) The Role of Pure Thought in Finite Knowledge	55
§ 11. The Pure Concepts of the Understanding (Notions)	55
§ 12. The Notions as Ontological Predicates (Categories)	58
The Second Stage of the Laying of the Foundation: The Essential Unity of Pure Knowledge	61
§ 13. The Question of the Essential Unity of Pure Knowledge	62
§ 14. The Ontological Synthesis	64
§ 15. The Problem of the Categories and the Role of Transcendental Logic	69
The Third Stage of the Laying of the Foundation: The Intrinsic Possibility of the Essential Unity of the Ontological Synthesis	72
§ 16. The Explication of the Transcendence of Finite Reason as the Basic Purpose of the Transcendental Deduction	74
§ 17. The Two Ways of the Transcendental Deduction	80
a) The First Way	82
b) The Second Way	86
§ 18. The External Form of the Transcendental Deduction	89
The Fourth Stage of the Laying of the Foundation: the Ground of the Intrinsic Possibility of Ontological Knowledge	93
§ 19. Transcendence and Sensibilization [Versinnlichung]	94
§ 20. Image and Schema	97
§ 21. Schema and Schema-Image	102
§ 22. The Transcendental Schematism	106
§ 23. Schematism and Subsumption	113
The Fifth Stage of the Laying of the Foundation: The Complete Determination of the Essence of Ontological Knowledge	118
§ 24. The Highest Synthetic Principle as the Complete Determination of the Essence of Transcendence	119
§ 25. Transcendence and the Laying of the Foundation of Metaphysica Generalis	124
Section Three: The Laying of the Foundation of Metaphysics in its Basic Originality	131
A. The Explicit Characterization of the Fundamental Ground Established in the Laying of the Foundation of Metaphysics	134
§ 26. The Transcendental Imagination as the Formative Center of Ontological Knowledge	134
§ 27. The Transcendental Imagination as the Third Fundamental Faculty	141

B. The Transcendental Imagination as the Root of Both Stems	144
§ 28. Transcendental Imagination and Pure Intuition	148
§ 29. Transcendental Imagination and Theoretical Reason	153
§ 30. Transcendental Imagination and Practical Reason	162
§ 31. The Basic Originality of the Established Ground and Kant's Recoil from Transcendental Imagination	166
C. The Transcendental Imagination and the Problem of Human Pure Reason	177
§ 32. The Transcendental Imagination and Its Relation to Time	178
§ 33. The Inherently Temporal Character of the Transcendental Imagination	181
a) Pure Synthesis as Pure Imagination	184
b) Pure Synthesis as Pure Reproduction	186
c) Pure Synthesis as Pure Recognition	188
§ 34. Time as Pure Self-affection and the Temporal Character of the Self	193
§ 35. The Basic Originality of the Established Ground and the Problem of Metaphysics	201
Section Four: The Laying of the Foundation of Metaphysics in a Repetition	209
A. The Laying of the Foundation of Metaphysics as Anthropology	212
§ 36. The Established Ground and the Result of Kant's Laying of the Foundation	212
§ 37. The Idea of a Philosophical Anthropology	215
§ 38. The Question of the Essence of Man and the True Result of Kant's Laying of the Foundation	221
B. The Problem of the Finitude in Man and the Metaphysics of Dasein	226
§ 39. The Problem of a Possible Determination of the Finitude in Man	226
§ 40. The Primordial Elaboration of the Question of Being as the Means of Access to the Problem of the Finitude in Man	229
§ 41. The Comprehension of Being and the Dasein in Man	233
C. The Metaphysics of Dasein as Fundamental Ontology	239
§ 42. The Idea of a Fundamental Ontology	240
§ 43. The Inception and Course of Development of Fundamental Ontology	242
§ 44. The Goal of Fundamental Ontology	247
§ 45. The Idea of Fundamental Ontology and the Critique of Pure Reason	251
