

Contents

Preface	xi
Acknowledgements	xiii
Overview	1
Philosophy and the problem of other minds	1
The history of the problem	4
And more history	13
The problem today	15
Part One: Knowledge of other minds	19
I Ancient and modern scepticism and the problem of other minds	21
Introduction	21
The ancient sceptics: a brief introduction	21
Ancient Greek scepticism and the problem of other minds	26
Ancient and modern scepticism	30
Other minds: an epistemological problem?	36
II Descartes and knowledge of other minds	45
Introduction	45
Brief interlude: St Augustine	46
Descartes and the problem of other minds	50
Descartes and the argument from analogy	51
Men versus automatons	55
All and (of corporeal beings) only human animals have minds	59

Contents

The test of a real man 62
Descartes' optimism 64

III Malebranche and knowledge of other men's souls

Introduction 68
Knowledge of one's own mind 72
Knowledge of bodies 76
Knowledge of other men's minds 79

Brief interlude: Arnaud on Malebranche on knowledge of other minds 85

IV John Locke and knowledge of other spirits

Introduction 88
Our idea of mind 90
'[Immaterial] substance, which we call spirit' 94
Other men's minds 99
Knowledge and opinion 105
Conclusion 110

V Berkeley and knowledge of other finite spirits

Introduction 113
The objects of human knowledge: ideas and spirit
Our (probable) knowledge of other finite spirits
Conclusion 132

Part Two: The problem of other minds

VI Thomas Reid and knowledge of other intelligent beings

Introduction 139
First principles of common sense 142
Scepticism and the evidence of the senses 146
First principles and other intelligent beings 151
Reid versus Berkeley 157
Conclusion 162

Brief interlude: John Stuart Mill 164

Brief interlude: Carnap and Schlick 171