

CONTENTS

NOTE ON TRANSLATIONS	xi
Chapter One: Prolegomenon: The Philosopher's World	1
§1 [Philosophy and science]	1
§2 [Analytic-Synthetic]	5
§3 [Necessity and Impossibility]	9
§4 [Hypothetical arguments]	14
§5 [ A Priori premisses]	18
§6 [Kant]	22
§7 [Idealism]	26
§8 [Why bother?]	28
Chapter Two: Method of Inquiry	32
§9 Reduction versus construction	32
§10 Neurath's ship	35
§11 'Comprehensible' as 'comprehensible to us'	38
§12 The protagonist as judge of his world	42
§13 Premises and layers of certainty	46
Chapter Three: Connection of Judgements	51
§14 Introduction and informal argument	51
§15 The first premiss	55
§16 Historical use of first premiss	59
§17 Immediate deductions from the first premiss	61
§18 Laws	69
§19 The case where the protagonist is always right	75
§20 Alternative premisses	81
Chapter Four: Time	89
§21 Necessity of space or time	89
§22 Particular model world to derive time	92
§23 Attempts to show this world incomprehensible	94
§24 Argument for the suggested feature	97
§25 That justification has an end	102
§26 That the majority of judgements are correct	108
§27 Atemporal and temporal worlds	114
§28 State of the inquiry	116
Chapter Five: Perception	118
§29 Introduction	118
§30 Argument for the intermediate feature	123
§31 Consequences of the possibility of error in present judgements	129

§32 Linguistic and other errors	135
§33 Formal argument for the same conclusion	139
§34 Phenomenalism and knowledge by acquaintance	145
§35 Another feature	149
Chapter Six: Private Languages	157
§36 Introduction	157
§37 Criticism of the argument	159
§38 An argument for interpersonal objects	162
§39 Wittgenstein's arguments	164
§40 Shoemaker's arguments	168
§41 Publicity and privacy	173
Chapter Seven: Space and Action	177
§42 Introduction	177
§43 Existence unperceived and space	179
§44 Active testing	182
§45 Consequences of action upon the world	185
§46 Volitions	190
§47 Further consequences of action	194
§48 Space	200
§49 Existence unperceived	205
§50 The general model world	207
INDEX	209