

Contents

List of Illustrations	xi
Roll Credits	xiii
Editors' Introduction	xvii
Notes	xxviii
Introduction: Impressions of Hume	1
Approaching Hume	11
On Beholding	13
Notes	18
1 Film Matters: Cinematic Thinking and the Politics of Discontinuity	23
The Action-Image	26
Discontinuity and the Fact of the Series	30
Actors, Artificial Persons, and Human Somethings	35
Political Resistance and an Aesthetics of Politics	38
Notes	41
2 A Treatment of Human Parts; or the Shot	45
On the Close-Up	45
Empiricism and Typographic Culture	50
Hume's Train of Thinking	55
Of Human Parts	64
Discomposing One's Character	70
Conclusion: A Micropolitics of Impressions	77
Notes	78
3 Hume's Iconomy	83
An Excess of Images	88

Fluid Supports	93
Conclusion	102
Notes	103
4 Hume's Point of View; or the Screen	105
Single-Point Perspective and the General Point of View	108
Impartiality, Sympathy, Reputation from a Cinematic Point of View	114
The Imagination and Hume's train of thinking	115
The "im" of Impartiality	117
The Hold of Sympathy	121
Reputation, Promising, and Projection	125
Conclusion: Sympathy's Claim	130
Notes	131
Conclusion: Hume and Cultural Politics	135
Notes	143
Bibliography	145
Index	151