

Contents

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS	ix
LIST OF PLATES	xiii
INTRODUCTION	xiv
1. Human Uniqueness as an Interdisciplinary Problem?	1	Contents
Interdisciplinarity in Theology and Science	10
Tradition and Communicative Understanding	24	vii
Interdisciplinarity and Human Uniqueness	34
Conclusion	39
2. Human Uniqueness and Cognitive Evolution	45
Human Distinctiveness in Paleontology	50
A. Human Uniqueness as a Moral Issue	51
B. Human Uniqueness and Hominid Evolution	60
Charles Darwin on Human Uniqueness	67
Evolutionary Epistemology and Human Uniqueness	75
A. Evolutionary Epistemology as Embodied Epistemology	79
B. Evolutionary Epistemology and Religion	93
Conclusion	106

3. Human Uniqueness and the Image of God	111
Human Uniqueness and the History of the Imago Dei	116
Contemporary Interpretations of the Imago Dei	132
The Imago Dei as Embodied Self	145
Conclusion	159
4. Human Uniqueness and Human Origins	163
Human Uniqueness and Paleoanthropology	165
Imagination and Prehistoric Art	187
Human Imagination and Religious Awareness	203
Conclusion	212
5. Human Uniqueness and Symbolization	217
Human Uniqueness and Language	221
Human Uniqueness and the Symbolic Mind	233
A. Handprints in the Deep Caves (Plates 1 and 2)	251
B. The Ithyphallic "Bird Man" from the Shaft in Lascaux (Plate 11)	252
C. The "Wounded Men" from Cougnac and Pech-Merle (Plates 3 and 4)	254
Human Uniqueness and Religious Imagination	261
Conclusion	267
6. Human Uniqueness in Science and Theology	271
Human Uniqueness and Embodiment	275
Human Uniqueness in the Jewish Tradition	292
Human Uniqueness and the Limits of Interdisciplinarity	299
Conclusion	307
BIBLIOGRAPHY	326
INDEX	337