

Georg Lukács's Philosophy of Praxis

From Neo-Kantianism to Marxism

Konstantinos Kavoulakos

University of Crete, Greece

Preface by Andrew Feenberg

BLOOMSBURY ACADEMIC
LONDON • NEW YORK • OXFORD • NEW DELHI • SYDNEY

Contents

Preface by Andrew Feenberg	x
Acknowledgments	xv
List of Abbreviations	xvi
1 Introduction: The Need to Reconsider Lukács's Philosophy of Praxis	1
Part 1 Method	11
2 The Problem of Content: A Neo-Kantian Theme	13
2.1 Heinrich Rickert's theory of knowledge	14
2.2 Emil Lask's turn toward a "logic of philosophy"	18
2.3 Form and material in Lask's transcendental ontology	20
2.4 Lask's theory of contemplative and active subjectivity	23
2.5 Lask and Lukács on the history of the problem of irrationality	26
2.6 Lukács's neo-Kantian account of the thing in itself	29
3 Flawed Philosophical Alternatives	35
3.1 Mathematics as a methodological model of rational systematization	37
3.2 Praxis as the first principle of systematization	39
3.3 Lukács's critique of ethical praxis	44
3.4 The principle of art and its mythologization	48
3.5 Aesthetic education and its limits	54
3.6 Lask and Lukács on Hegel's dialectical holism	58
3.7 Lukács's critique of the formalist tendency in Hegel's philosophy of history	64
4 Lukács's Materialist Theory of History	71
4.1 Lukács's critique of the formalist philosophy of history	73
4.2 Lukács's critique of political economy and reformist Marxism	77
4.3 The metacritique of knowledge and the unity of theory and praxis	79
4.4 Materialist dialectic	82

4.5	Dialectical theory of history: Beyond objectivism and subjectivism	87
4.6	The concept of the form of objectivity	90
Part 2 Theory		93
5	The Origins of the Concept of Reification in Lukács's Early Work	95
5.1	Methodological presuppositions of a non-reductionist social history of literature	96
5.2	Lukács's early theory of social rationalization	98
5.3	Lukács's neo-Kantian distanciation from Lebensphilosophie	102
5.4	A neo-Kantian theory of the ossification of "experienced reality"	104
5.5	The historicization of the theory of experienced reality	109
6	The Modern Form of Objectivity	115
6.1	Commodity form as the prototype of the modern form of objectivity	115
6.2	The universalization of the modern form of objectivity: Calculative rationality	121
6.3	Crisis as the limit of the modern form of objectivity	124
7	What Is Reification?	129
7.1	Lukács's concept of reification	130
7.2	Reification and objectification	134
7.3	Reification and contemplation	137
7.4	What reification is not	141
7.5	A reified concept of reification	146
Part 3 Praxis		151
8	From Mystical Ethics to Transformative Praxis	153
8.1	Lukács's mystical "second ethics"	154
8.2	The tragedy of revolutionary action	158
8.3	Beyond ethics: The paradigm of class consciousness	161
8.4	Lukács's theory of ascribed class consciousness	163
8.5	The unity of theory and praxis	170
8.6	The dialectic of transformative praxis	172

9	Dereifying Capitalism	177
9.1	Lukács's typology of class consciousness	178
9.2	Proletarian subjectification as a corollary of a natural principle	182
9.3	The constitution of class consciousness as a leap to the radically new	185
9.4	Subjectification as a historical process	187
9.5	Revolutionary juncture and the problem of violence	190
9.6	Dereification as a historical process	194
10	Limits of Dereification	199
10.1	The party as a "real form of mediation"	200
10.2	The dialectic of the party's external and internal life	204
10.3	Party politics and the internal limit of dereification	207
10.4	Nature as a social category	210
10.5	The dialectic of nature and the external limit of dereification	213
11	Epilogue: The Significance of Lukács's Philosophy of Praxis Today	219
	References	229
	Index	247