
SAINT THOMAS AQUINAS

SUMMA CONTRA GENTILES
BOOKS I–II

Translated by Fr. Laurence Shapcote, OP

SUMMA CONTRA GENTILES

Volume 11

Latin/English Edition of the Works of St. Thomas Aquinas

AQUINAS INSTITUTE
GREEN BAY, WI

EMMAUS ACADEMIC
STEUBENVILLE, OH

Contents

SUMMA CONTRA GENTILES BOOK I

Introduction

1. In what the office of a wise man consists 1
2. The author's intention in this work..... 2

Faith and reason

3. In what way it is possible to make known the divine truth 4
4. That the truth about divine things which is attainable by reason is fittingly proposed to man as an object of belief 6
5. That those things which cannot be investigated by reason are fittingly proposed to man as an object of faith 7
6. That it is not a mark of levity to assent to the things that are of faith although they are above reason..... 9
7. That the truth of reason is not in opposition to the truth of the Christian faith..... 10
8. In what relation human reason stands to the truth of faith 11
9. Of the order and mode of procedure in this work..... 12

God's existence

10. Of the opinion of those who say it cannot be demonstrated that there is a God, since this is self-evident 14
11. Refutation of the foregoing opinion and solution of the aforesaid arguments 15
12. Of the opinion of those who say that the existence of God cannot be proved and that it is held by faith alone..... 17
13. Arguments in proof of God's existence..... 18
14. That to acquire knowledge of God one must use the way of remotion..... 25

The divine nature

15. That God is eternal 27
16. That in God there is no passive potency 28
17. That in God there is no matter 29
18. That in God there is no composition 30
19. That in God there is nothing violent or beside nature 31
20. That God is not a body 32
21. That God is his own essence 39
22. That in God essence and existence are the same..... 40
23. That there is no accident in God..... 42
24. That the divine being cannot be specified by the addition of any substantial difference 44
25. That God is not in any genus 45
26. That God is not the formal being of all things 46
27. That God is not the form of a body 49
28. Of the divine perfection..... 50
29. Of the likeness of creatures 52
30. What terms can be predicated of God 53
31. That the divine perfection and the plurality of divine names are not inconsistent with the divine simplicity 55
32. That nothing is predicated univocally of God and other things 56
33. That not all terms applied to God and creatures are purely equivocal..... 57
34. That terms applied to God and creatures are said analogically..... 58
35. That the several names predicated of God are not synonymous..... 59
36. How our intellect forms a proposition about God..... 60
37. That God is good 60

38.	That God is goodness itself	61
39.	That no evil can be in God.....	62
40.	That God is the good of every good.....	63
41.	That God is the highest good.....	64
42.	That God is one.....	65
43.	That God is infinite.....	69

God's knowledge

44.	That God is an intelligent being.....	73
45.	That God's act of intelligence is his essence	75
46.	That God understands by nothing else than his essence	76
47.	That God understands himself perfectly	77
48.	That God knows only himself first and essentially	78
49.	That God knows things other than himself	79
50.	That God has proper knowledge of all things	80
51.	Reasons for inquiring how there is a multitude of things understood in the divine intellect.....	82
52.	Continuation of the foregoing	84
53.	Solution of the foregoing doubt.....	84
54.	How the divine essence, though one and simple, is a proper likeness of all things intelligible.....	85
55.	That God understands all things at the same instant.....	87
56.	That God's knowledge is not a habit	89
57.	That God's knowledge is not discursive	90
58.	That God does not understand by composition and division.....	92
59.	That God is not ignorant of the truth of enunciations.....	93
60.	That God is truth	94
61.	That God is the most pure truth	95
62.	That the divine truth is the first and supreme truth.....	96
63.	The arguments of those who would deny to God the knowledge of singulars	97
64.	Order of the things to be said about the divine knowledge	98
65.	That God knows singulars	99
66.	That God knows the things that are not	101
67.	That God knows future contingent singulars.....	104
68.	That God knows the movements of the will	106
69.	That God knows infinite things	108
70.	That God knows trivial things	111
71.	That God knows evil things	113

God's will

72.	That in God there is will	116
73.	That God's will is his essence	118
74.	That the principal object of God's will is the divine essence.....	118
75.	That God in willing himself wills also other things	119
76.	That God, by the one act of his will, wills himself and other things	121
77.	That the multitude of things willed is not inconsistent with the divine simplicity	122
78.	That the divine will extends to particular goods.....	123
79.	That God wills even the things that are not yet	124
80.	That God necessarily wills his being and his goodness.....	125
81.	That God does not necessarily will other things than himself.....	126
82.	Objections against the statement that God wills not of necessity things other than himself.....	128
83.	That God wills something other than himself by a necessity of supposition	130
84.	That God's will is not of things impossible in themselves.....	131
85.	That the divine will does not remove contingency from things nor impose absolute necessity on them.....	132
86.	That a reason of the divine will can be assigned	133
87.	That nothing can be the cause of the divine will.....	134
88.	That in God there is free will	134

God's life

89.	That the passions of the appetite are not in God	136
90.	That in God are delight and joy, nor are they incompatible with the divine perfection	138
91.	That in God there is love.....	139
92.	How virtues are to be ascribed to God	142
93.	That in God there are moral virtues which are about actions.....	144
94.	That the contemplative virtues are in God.....	146
95.	That God cannot will evil	147
96.	That God hates nothing, nor can the hatred of anything be ascribed to him	148
97.	That God is a living being.....	149
98.	That God is his own life	150
99.	That God's life is eternal.....	151
100.	That God is happy.....	152
101.	That God is his own happiness	153
102.	That God's happiness is perfect and singular, surpassing all other happiness.....	154

SUMMA CONTRA GENTILES
BOOK II

Introduction

1.	Connection of the foregoing with the sequel.....	159
2.	That the consideration of creatures is useful for building up our faith	160
3.	That the knowledge of the nature of creatures avails for refuting errors against God	161
4.	That the philosopher and the theologian treat of creatures in different ways.....	163
5.	Order of the things to be said	164

God's power

6.	That it becomes God to be the source of being to other things	165
7.	That in God there is active power	166
8.	That God's power is his substance	167
9.	That God's power is his action	167
10.	In what way power is ascribed to God.....	168
11.	That something is said of God in relation to creatures	169
12.	That relations said of God in reference to creatures are not really in God.....	169
13.	How the aforesaid relations are predicated of God.....	170
14.	Continuation of the foregoing	171
15.	That God is the cause of being to all things	172
16.	That God brought things into being out of nothing	174
17.	That creation is neither movement nor change	177
18.	How to solve the objections against creation.....	178
19.	That in creation there is no succession	178
20.	That no body can create.....	180
21.	That it belongs to God alone to create	181
22.	That God can do all things.....	184
23.	That God does not act of natural necessity.....	186
24.	That God works according to his wisdom	188

25.	How the Almighty is said to be unable to do certain things.....	190
26.	That the divine intellect is not confined to certain determined effects.....	192
27.	That the divine will is not confined to certain effects.....	194

Creation in general

28.	How there is anything due in the production of things.....	195
29.	Continuation of the foregoing.....	197
30.	How there can be absolute necessity in created things.....	199
31.	That it is not necessary for creatures to have been always.....	203
32.	Arguments of those who wish to prove the eternity of the world from God's side of the question.....	205
33.	Arguments of those who would prove the eternity of the world from the point of view of creatures.....	207
34.	Arguments to prove the eternity of the world from the point of view of the making.....	209
35.	Solution of the foregoing arguments, and first of those taken from the standpoint of God.....	211
36.	Solution of the arguments produced on the part of the things made.....	214
37.	Solution of the arguments taken from the making of things.....	215
38.	Arguments by which some endeavor to prove that the world is not eternal.....	217

The distinction of things

39.	That the distinction of things is not from chance.....	220
40.	That matter is not the first cause of the distinction of things.....	222
41.	That the distinction of things is not on account of a contrariety of agents.....	223
42.	That the first cause of the distinction of things is not the order of secondary agents.....	226
43.	That the distinction among things does not result from some secondary agent introducing various forms into matter.....	228
44.	That distinction among things did not result from the diversity of merits or demerits.....	230
45.	What is in truth the first cause of the distinction of things.....	234

Intellectual creatures

46.	That for the perfection of the universe it was necessary that there should be some intellectual creatures.....	237
47.	That intellectual substances are capable of willing.....	239
48.	That intellectual substances are of free will in acting.....	241
49.	That the intellectual substance is not a body.....	242
50.	That intellectual substances are immaterial.....	244
51.	That the intellectual substance is not a material form.....	246
52.	That in created intellectual substances there is a difference between being and what is.....	247
53.	That in created intellectual substances there is act and potency.....	249
54.	That composition of substance and being is not the same as composition of matter and form.....	250
55.	That intellectual substances are incorruptible.....	251
56.	In what way it is possible for an intellectual substance to be united to the body.....	255
57.	The opinion of Plato concerning the union of the intellectual soul with the body.....	258
58.	That the nutritive, sensitive, and intellective faculties in man are not three souls.....	261
59.	That man's possible intellect is not a separate substance.....	264
60.	That man derives his species not from the passive, but from the possible intellect.....	267
61.	That the aforesaid opinion is contrary to that of Aristotle.....	273
62.	Against the opinion of Alexander about the possible intellect.....	274
63.	That the soul is not a temperament, as Galen asserted.....	277
64.	That the soul is not a harmony.....	278
65.	That the soul is not a body.....	279
66.	Against those who say that intellect and sense are the same.....	280
67.	Against those who say that the possible intellect is the imagination.....	281
68.	How an intellectual substance can be the form of the body.....	281
69.	Solution of the arguments by which it was proved above that an intellectual substance cannot be united to the body as its form.....	284
70.	That according to the words of Aristotle we must say that the intellect is united to the body as its form.....	286
71.	That the soul is united to the body immediately.....	287

72.	That the whole soul is in the whole body and in each part thereof.....	288
73.	That there is not one possible intellect in all men.....	289
74.	Of the opinion of Avicenna, who asserted that intelligible forms are not preserved in the possible intellect	297
75.	Solution of the arguments which would seem to prove the unity of the possible intellect	301
76.	That the active intellect is not a separate substance but part of the soul.....	306
77.	That it is not impossible for the possible and active intellect to concur in the one substance of the soul.....	310
78.	That Aristotle's opinion concerning the active intellect was not that it is a separate substance, but rather that it is part of the soul.....	312

The human soul

79.	That the human soul is not corrupted when the body is corrupted.....	317
80.	Arguments to prove that the soul is corrupted when the body is corrupted	320
81.	Continuation of the foregoing	322
82.	That the souls of dumb animals are not immortal.....	325
83.	That the human soul begins to exist with the body	329
84.	Solution of the foregoing arguments	337
85.	That the soul is not made of God's substance	339
86.	That the human soul is not transmitted with the semen	341
87.	That the human soul is brought into being through creation by God	343
88.	Arguments for proving that the human soul is formed from the semen.....	344
89.	Solution of the foregoing arguments	347
90.	That an intellectual substance is united as a form to no other than the human body	353

Separate substances

91.	That there are some intellectual substances which are not united to bodies	356
92.	Of the great number of separate substances	358
93.	That there are not several separate substances of one species.....	362
94.	That the separate substance and the soul are not of one species.....	363
95.	How we are to understand genus and species in separate substances.....	364
96.	That separate substances do not gather their knowledge from sensibles.....	365
97.	That the intellect of a separate substance always understands actually.....	368
98.	How one separate substance understands another	369
99.	That separate substances know material things	374
100.	That separate substances know singulars.....	375
101.	Whether separate substances know all things at the same time by their natural knowledge.....	376