

MEDIEVAL PHILOSOPHY

An historical and philosophical introduction

John Marenbon

 Routledge
Taylor & Francis Group
LONDON AND NEW YORK

CONTENTS

Preface	ix
Methods of reference	xi
Abbreviations	xiii
1 Introduction	1
2 The ancient traditions in medieval philosophy	6
1 What was ancient philosophy?	6
2 Some Aristotelian themes	7
3 Plato, and the Hellenistic Schools	13
4 Plotinus's Neoplatonism	16
5 Porphyry and Aristotelian logic	20
6 Iamblichus and Proclus	22
7 Old and new religions	25
8 Translations, Latin philosophy and the Latin Fathers	28
9 Augustine	29
3 Old traditions and new beginnings	34
1 Boethius and the logical curriculum at the end of antiquity	35
Study A: The problem of prescience in Boethius's 'Consolation'	42
2 Monks and encyclopaedists: the Latin West from 525–780	46
Interlude i: Philosophy and a manuscript culture	48
3 The last pagan philosophers, and their Christian pupils	50
Study B: Eternity and the universe: Augustine, Boethius and Philoponus	53
4 The East, from Justinian to the Umayyads	56
5 The varieties of philosophy under the 'Abbāsids	62
6 Alcuin and philosophy at the court of Charlemagne	70

7	John Scottus Eriugena and the ninth century	73
	Study C: Gottschalk, Eriugena and his contemporaries on predestination and salvation	78
8	Commentary traditions: Byzantium and the Latin West	82
	Interlude ii: Priscianus ad regem Osdroe	83
4	Traditions apart		85
1	The beginnings of medieval Jewish philosophy	85
2	The kalâm tradition	88
	Interlude iii: Arabic free-thinkers?	90
3	Fârâbî	91
4	Ismailis and Neoplatonists	100
5	Avicenna	103
6	Ancient philosophy, logic and metaphysics in the eleventh-century Latin West	114
7	Anselm	119
	Study D: Anselm's 'ontological' argument	124
8	Psellos, Italos, and the twelfth-century Byzantine Aristotelians	129
5	Latin philosophy in the twelfth century		131
1	Logic and grammar at the turn of the twelfth century	132
2	Peter Abelard	135
	Study E: Abelard on universals	139
	Interlude iv: Abelard, the Philosophus and the ancient philosophers	144
	Study F: Abelard and early medieval ethics	145
3	The schools, Platonism and William of Conches	148
4	Gilbert of Poitiers	152
	Study G: Abelard and Gilbert on possibility	156
5	The beginnings of Latin scholastic theology	160
6	The Platonisms of the later twelfth century	161
	Interlude v: Platonism and poetry	163
7	The Parisian schools of the later twelfth century	164
8	Beyond Paris: the scientists and the translators	169
9	The variety and distinctiveness of twelfth-century Latin philosophy	171
6	Philosophy in twelfth-century Islam		172
1	Islamic theology and Avicenna	172
	Interlude vi: Suhrawardî – theosophist or philosopher?	177

2	Philosophy in al-Andalus	178
3	Averroes	182
	Interlude vii: Marriage in the Republic	191
4	Maimonides and Jewish Aristotelianism	192
7	Philosophy in Paris and Oxford, 1200–77	205
1	Paris and Oxford universities: the translations, the curriculum and the forms of philosophical writing	206
	Interlude viii: Pseudepigrapha and the medieval Aristotle	214
2	Grammar and logic	218
3	Arts Masters and theologians: 1200–50	224
4	Theology in Paris: Bonaventure and Albert the Great	230
5	Thomas Aquinas	236
	Interlude ix: Aquinas and the historiography of medieval philosophy	245
	Study H: The five ways	247
	Study I: Aquinas on eternity and prescience	251
6	Latin Averroism: the Paris Arts Faculty in the 1260s and 1270s	254
	Study J: The eternity of the world: Bonaventure, Aquinas and Boethius of Dacia	258
	Study K: The potential intellect, Aquinas, Averroes and Siger of Brabant	262
7	The 1277 condemnations and their significance	266
8	Philosophy in the universities, 1280–1400	271
1	The Albertine tradition	272
2	Henry of Ghent, Godfrey of Fontaines and Peter John Olivi	275
3	Duns Scotus	280
	Interlude x: Scotus, the King of France and the Jews	287
	Study L: Scotus on possibility	290
4	Between Scotus and Ockham	293
5	William of Ockham	296
	Study M: Ockham and the problem of prescience	305
6	The Paris Arts Faculty and fourteenth-century Averroism	308
7	Oxford and Paris theology after Ockham	311
	Interlude xi: Holcot and the philosophers	314
8	Logica modernorum	319
9	John Buridan	322
10	The late fourteenth century	325
	Interlude xii: How far can you go? Biagio Pelacani di Parma	327

9	Philosophy outside the universities, 1200–1400	329
1	Outside the universities: philosophy, courts and the vernacular in the Latin West	330
2	Byzantine philosophy	335
3	Philosophy in Islam	338
4	Jewish philosophy	339
10	Not an epilogue: ‘medieval’ philosophy, 1400–1700	349
	Guide to further reading and material	353
	Bibliography	385
	Index	437