

Juan J. Colomina-Almiñana

Formal Approach to the Metaphysics of Perspectives

Points of View as Access

 Springer

Contents

1	A World of Points of View	1
1.1	The Ordinary Notion of Point of View Is Epistemological	2
1.2	Points of View as Fundamental Grounding Relations	4
1.3	What Points of View as Access Are not	7
1.4	Metaphysical Points of View as Dispositions	21
2	Contextualizing Points of View	27
2.1	Points of View May Be Considered from Two Different Models	28
2.2	Historical Overview of the Notion of Point of View	32
2.2.1	The Ancient Times	32
2.2.2	The Medieval Ages	33
2.2.3	Leibniz	35
2.2.4	Spinoza	37
2.2.5	Rationalism Versus Empiricism	38
2.2.6	Nietzsche's Perspectivism	40
2.2.7	Nelson Goodman's Ways of Worldmaking	41
2.3	Points of View as Access to the World: The Twentieth Century	44
2.3.1	Absolute Points of View	44
2.3.2	The Logic of Points of View	53
2.3.3	Points of View as Conceptual Spaces	56
2.4	Conclusion	59
3	Adopting a Point of View	61
3.1	A Behavioral Approach to Points of View	62
3.2	The Moral Point of View	65
3.3	Ways of Evaluating the Adoption of a Point of View	73
3.4	Recapitulation	80

4	Points of View as Grounding	81
4.1	Ontological Dependence, Fundamentality, and the Notion of Grounding	82
4.2	The Feasibility of Determinables	84
4.3	A Formal Reconstruction of Points of View	94
4.4	Appendix	102
5	Comparing and Evaluating Points of View	105
5.1	An Initial Attempt of Comparison	106
5.2	Frame of Translation and Degrees of Comparison Between Points of View	107
5.3	Adequacy, Points of View, and the Problem of Perspectival Variance	113
6	A Pluralist Notion of Truth for Metaphysical Points of View	117
6.1	Verbal Disputes and Merely Verbal Disputes	119
6.2	Merely Verbal Disputes and Meta-Linguistic Negotiation	122
6.3	The Relation Between Metaphysical and Epistemic Points of View	132
	Conclusion	143
	References	147