

HUSSERL'S PHENOMENOLOGY

Dan Zahavi

STANFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS

STANFORD, CALIFORNIA

2003

Contents

Preface to the English Edition	ix
Introduction	I
1. The Early Husserl: Logic, Epistemology, and Intentionality	7
Husserl's Criticism of Psychologism 7—The Concept of Intentionality 13
Act, Meaning, Object 22—Signitive and Intuitive Givenness 27
Evidence 31—Categorial Objects and Wesensschau 35
Phenomenology and Metaphysics 39
2. Husserl's Turn to Transcendental Philosophy: Epoché, Reduction, and Transcendental Idealism	43
Presuppositionlessness 44—The Cartesian Way and the Ontological
Way 47—Some Misunderstandings 53—Husserl's Transcendental
Idealism 68—The Concept of Constitution 72
3. The Later Husserl: Time, Body, Intersubjectivity, and Lifeworld	79
A. TIME 80
Primal Impression-Retention-Protention 81—Absolute
Consciousness 86—Horizon and Presence 93
B. THE BODY 98
The Body and Perspectivity 98—The Body as Subject and the Body
as Object 101

C. INTERSUBJECTIVITY 109

Solipsism 109—Transcendental Intersubjectivity 110—The Experience of the Other 112—The Constituting Intersubjectivity 115
Subjectivity—Inter/subjectivity 120

D. THE LIFEWORLD 125

The Lifeworld and the Crisis of Science 125—Normality and Tradition 133

Conclusion 141

Notes 147

Bibliography 161

Index 175