

I, Me, Mine

Back to Kant, and Back Again

Béatrice Longuenesse

OXFORD
UNIVERSITY PRESS

Contents

Preface and Acknowledgments	xi
Conventions	xix

1. Introduction	1
-----------------	---

Part I. Back To...

2. Uses of 'I'	19
2.1 Wittgenstein and His Critics on the Use of 'I' as Subject	20
2.1.1 Wittgenstein's Distinction	20
2.1.2 Shoemaker's Amendment	21
2.1.3 Uses of 'I' as Object	21
2.1.4 Evans on 'I'-Thoughts	23
2.2 Kant on Consciousness of Oneself as Subject	26
2.3 Psychological Case Studies	32
2.4 Concluding Remarks	37
3. Non-Thetic Self-Consciousness and Uses of 'I'	44
3.1 Sartre on "Positional" or "Thetic" Consciousness of Object and "Non-Positional" or "Non-Thetic" (Self-)Consciousness	45
3.2 Wittgenstein on "Use of 'I' as Subject" and "Use of 'I' as Object"	48
3.3 Uses of 'I' and Consciousness of One's Own Body	51
3.4 Sartre on Non-Thetic Consciousness (of) the Body	54
3.5 Anscombe on 'I' and Sartre on Non-Thetic Self-Consciousness	59
3.6 Taking Stock	64

Part II. ... Kant

4. Kant on 'I Think'	73
4.1 Descartes's 'Cogito, Ergo Sum'	74
4.2 Kant's 'I Think'	77
4.3 'I Think' = 'I Exist Thinking'	82
4.3.1 Kant on Descartes's Cogito Argument	82
4.3.2 Three Kinds of Consciousness of My Own Thinking	86
4.3.2.1 The Mere Consciousness of the Act of Thinking	86
4.3.2.2 The Indeterminate Perception that I Think	87
4.3.2.3 The Empirically Determined Consciousness of the Sequence of My Mental States	91
4.3.3 Kant and Descartes on Perceiving that One Thinks	92
4.4 Interlude: Anderson on Longuenesse on Kant on Descartes' Cogito Argument	93
4.5 Concluding Remarks	94

5.	Kant on 'I' and the Soul	102
5.1	Ambiguities in Kant's Terminology	103
5.1.1	Transcendental Unity of Apperception	103
5.1.2	I Think	104
5.1.3	I	107
5.1.4	Subject	108
5.1.5	Soul	109
5.1.6	Self	111
5.2	"The First Paralogism, of Substantiality"	112
5.2.1	The First Paralogism in A	113
5.2.1.1	Comments on the Major Premise	113
5.2.1.2	Comments on the Minor Premise	115
5.2.1.3	Where is the Paralogism?	115
5.2.1.4	Another Way to Go	121
5.2.2	The First Paralogism in B	121
5.2.2.1	Kant's Statement of the Paralogism in B	121
5.2.2.2	About the Major Premise, Comparison of A and B	124
5.2.2.3	About the Minor Premise and the Conclusion, Comparison of A and B	124
5.3	"The Second Paralogism, of Simplicity"	125
5.3.1	The Second Paralogism in A	125
5.3.1.1	The Major Premise	126
5.3.1.2	The Minor Premise	128
5.3.2	The Second Paralogism in B	129
5.3.3	Logical Subject and Subjective 'I'	130
5.4	Concluding Remarks	131
6.	Kant on the Identity of Persons	140
6.1	Kant's Criticism of the Paralogism of Personality	141
6.2	"I, as Thinking," and Consciousness of Identity in Different Times	142
6.3	Consciousness of Identity and Personhood	146
6.4	Kant's Person, and the Moral Standpoint	152
6.5	Kant and Strawson on Persons	158
6.6	Concluding Remarks	163

Part III. . . . And Back Again

7.	Kant's 'I' in 'I Think' and Freud's "Ego"	173
7.1	Preliminary Remarks	173
7.2	Kant on 'I' in 'I Think'	176
7.2.1	'I,' Discursive Thinking, and Being Conscious of One's Representations	176
7.2.2	Discursive Thinking and Synthesis of Imagination	181
7.2.3	We are "Seldom Even Conscious" of the Synthesis of Imagination	181
7.2.4	'I' and Consciousness of One's Own Body	183
7.3	Freud on "das Ich" ("the Ego")	185
7.3.1	Consciousness and What is Unconscious	185
7.3.2	"Ego" and "Id"	186

7.4	Kant's ' Ich ' in ' Ich denke ' and Freud's ' Ich '	188
7.4.1	'I,' Discursive Thinking, and Consciousness of One's Representations	189
7.4.2	Kant's Synthesis of Imagination and Freud's Perceptual Images Organized According to the Rules of the Ego	190
7.4.3	Mental Activities of Which We are "Seldom Even Conscious"	191
7.4.4	'I' and the Body	193
7.5	Concluding Remarks	194
8.	Kant's 'I' in the Moral 'I Ought To' and Freud's "Super-Ego"	204
8.1	Preliminary Remarks	204
8.2	Kant's 'I' in 'I Ought To'	209
8.2.1	The Moral 'I Ought To' and Mental Conflict	209
8.2.2	'I Ought To' and Pre-Discursive Determination of the Will	212
8.2.3	Motivated Blindness to the Grounds of One's Actions	213
8.2.4	'I' in 'I Ought To' and Consciousness of One's Body	216
8.3	Freud's Super-Ego	218
8.4	Kant's 'I' in 'I Ought To' and Freud's Super-Ego	220
8.4.1	Mental Conflict	220
8.4.2	Discursive, Pre-Discursive, Non-Discursive Mental Activity	221
8.4.3	Motivated Blindness	222
8.4.4	'I' in 'I Ought To,' Freud's "Super-Ego," and Embodiment	224
8.5	Concluding Remarks	226
9.	Epilogue	231
	Bibliography	239
	General Index	247
	Name Index	255