

CONTENTS

GENERAL EDITOR'S PREFACE	vii
ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS	ix
1 Representing the postmodern	1
What is postmodernism?	1
Representation and its politics	2
Whose postmodernism?	10
Postmodernity, postmodernism, and modernism	23
2 Postmodernist representation	29
De-naturalizing the natural	29
Photographic discourse	40
Telling stories: fiction and history	44
3 Re-presenting the past	59
'Total history' de-totalized	59
Knowing the past in the present	67
The archive as text	75
4 The politics of parody	89
Parodic postmodern representation	89

	Double-coded politics	97
	Postmodern film?	102
5	Text/image border tensions	114
	The paradoxes of photography	114
	The ideological arena of photo-graphy	120
	The politics of address	130
6	Postmodernism and feminisms	137
	Politicizing desire	138
	Feminist postmodernist parody	146
	The private and the public	156
	EPILOGUE: THE POSTMODERN . . . IN RETROSPECT	165
	'What was postmodernism?'	165
	Internationalizing the postmodern . . . and colliding with the postcolonial	172
	Irony versus nostalgia: postmodernism and queer theory and practice	176
	The world, the text, and the critique	179
	CONCLUDING NOTE: SOME DIRECTED READING	182
	BIBLIOGRAPHY	185
	INDEX	213