

|  |            |  |            |
|--|------------|--|------------|
| Foreword   | 6          | 5 A "heroic aesthetic"   | 160        |
| • Practical Notes  | 12         | • A reply to Matisse: the advent of the "purist" aesthetic   | 170        |
| Heroic overture  | 14         | • "Primitivist" idealization: the first visions of absolute form   | 175        |
|  |            | • On the political use of the peasant subterfuge   | 180        |
| 1 From Kursk to Moscow: the growth of a vocation              | 24  |  |            |
|  |            | 6 The "significant volume"  | 186 |
| 2 Impressionist fervor: "operations concerning light"         | 40  | • Disturbing the integrity of things   | 196        |
| • An "instantaneous action" meant to reveal the "world's unity"      | 47         | • The persistence of the peasant theme as the basis of formal transmutation                                | 206        |
| • Dematerializing nature   | 50         | • The organization of concepts originating from Western Cubism   | 209        |
|  |            |  |            |
| 3 "The quest for the great cosmogonic myth"                   | 64  | 7 "The new rhythm"  | 216 |
| • "That vague cosmic religiosity sweeping through me..."             | 79         | • The most Cubist of the Cubists ...   | 219        |
| • "Expressing certain spiritual experiences through pictorial forms" | 87         | • Escaping the "Darwinism of geometry"   | 229        |
| • Not the eye but thought's mysterious center                        | 100        | • Simply the dynamic sensation itself  | 234        |
| • The aesthetic mirror   | 102        | • "Concerning the difficulty of contriving new [compositional] schemes and the danger of arid abstraction" | 238        |
|  |            |  |            |
| 4 Colors igniting in the painter's mind                       | 106 | 8 "Stripping away the banal appearance of things"   | 242 |
| • Moscow, the other hub of French art                                | 113        | • At the origins of a new cosmic consciousness:  |            |
| • "Cézanne is the master of us all." Henri Matisse                   | 118        | the mystery of the fourth dimension  | 248        |
| • The energy of "liberated color"                                    | 124        | • Cubism, [that] incomplete epithet ...  | 254        |
| • Malewicz's response to Matisse: the "essence of knowable form"     | 144        |  |            |
| • Going beyond the face value of images: toward a new iconic order   | 149        |  |            |

9 A reply to Futurism: “changing quantity into quality” 258

- “Introducing confusion into the construction” 264
- Displacing the links to the visible ... 271
- New concepts of convexity ... 278
- Only through the operation of thought does the visible world become a real world ... 282
- Mastering the universal dynamism ... 286
- Objects vanishing like smoke ... 288

10 “On the threshold of a new spring”: the revolution of Victory over the Sun 294

- The avant-garde’s stakes in the theatrical competition 300
- Toward a dictatorship of the eye 307
- An archaeology of the anti-opera 309
- The Futurists’ “heliomachia,” an initiatic mystery for the modern age 315
- The call for a “cylindrical sonority” in noises and vowels 324
- The plane in motion: the foundation of the new world 326
- Going beyond anthropomorphic conventions: costumes consisting of “triangles, circles, variegated squares and other geometric figures.” 334

11 “Planes are appearing” 344

- Transcending avant-garde militancy 349
- From the theatrical action to the symbolic space of the picture 352
- The shock of the raw image freed from its figurative context 358
- Beyond Picasso: the search for a Cubist absolute 362
- Collage, that “reign of simulacrum which is the supreme heresy in art ...” 371
- The plane: a creation of intuitive reason 380
- Against a new naturalism ... 383
- Exploring the limits of Cubist mimesis 387

12 “Casting off the luggage of wisdom ...” 396

- Attaining the unknown through a disordering of all the senses ... 406
- Things used magically ... 422
- Art moves toward the domination of nature’s forms ... 434
- Banning sweet Psyche’s smile [from painting] 436
- The “surgery” of form 442
- Untying the knots of wisdom ... 453

Index of names 463

Malewicz’s works in public collections reproduced in Volume 1 472

Works by other artists 475

Acknowledgements 476

Abbreviations 477